The Little Man, as Usual. Big Day, Number Three. Your Wonderful Brain. Welcome, MacDonald.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

EVERY RICH MAN in America, from banker to bootlegger, asks every other rich man what leaving the gold basis means. Those that need to ask the question are men on small salaries. Prices of food and other necessities will go higher, but their salaries will not go higher—or, at best, rise slowly.

It would have been a good idea to have left the gold basis before nation-wide salary reductions were forced on employers.

As usual, when big things happen, it is the "little man" who gets hit. In war he gets shot. In panics he is poor. In depressions his wages go down. Off the gold basis, his dollar is worth less.

But he is very patient.

Another big Wall Street day, 5,000,000 shares sold, not as big as Thursday, prices not so gay. The dollar recovered its health and went up a little. That discouraged stock prices. It was the turn of European money to drop.

Anybody who imagined that the United States would print unlimited quantities of money, simply because green paper is cheap, made a mistake.

It should fill you with pride to know that you have in your brain "four quadrillions of electric motors that generate power for thought." Four quadrillions is a good many.

Put down 4, with 15 zeros after it ,thus, 4,000,000,000,000,000, and you have it.

You get this gratifying information from Dr. George W. Crile, of Cleveland, a really great scientist. In the Bible man says, "I will praise the Lord, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made." Dr. Crile proves it for him.

Dr. Crile says, "Mind is a product of electricity generated by matter." The brain, if you please, produces short-wave and infra-red radiation. Electrons are ejected from the brain protoplasm with the emission of these waves, and "these electrons set up the electric current responsible for all our thinking and reasoning processes."

Your adrenal gland, located just over the kidneys, is the brain's power station, and "collaborates with a hormone in the thyroid gland," which is in your neck. And that queer hormone is your real ruler.

Such strange news might disturb a feeble mind, making it doubt the existence of a soul or a Creator. Nobody has yet told us, however, what power created the "four quadrillion motors."

Premier MacDonald of Great Britain arrives here smiling. just in time to see Uncle Sam fall off the gold basis and land on his feet.

MacDonald says he comes to discuss "war on unmerited poverty." Not quite all the poverty is "unmerited." Whoever started that big war deserves all he got and more. But nobody will ever know who started it, who the "Mrs. O'Leary's cow" was that kicked over that lantern. Perhaps no one started it and it just happened. When will it "happen" again?

The new giant dirigible Macon, on its trial flight, carried 105 persons, including 11 officers, 31 engineers, eight members of the naval board of inspection and Goodyear-Zeppelin Co. inspectors. The biggest airship in existence, 785 feet long, it typifies Uncle Sam's determination not to let anything discourage him.

If Germany can build and operate dirigibles safely this country can do it, and will prove it.

Meanwhile, the mismanagement, or whatever it was, that caused the loss of the Akron should be investigated carefully. A ship nearly 800 feet long, flying only 1600 feet above the ocean, about twice her own length, and flying directly into a thunderstorm, with its terrific up and down air currents, was not fairly treated, to put it moderately, and the destruction should not be dismissed as "an act of God."

Mussolini and the rest of Italy yesterday celebrated Rome's birthday, number 2686. An old age, but, thanks to Mussolini, Rome is younger than ever.

As part of the celebration, Mussolini dedicated statues of five emperors, erected by his orders on the Via del Impero, "Street of the Empire." Stores, schools, public offices were closed. Mussolini builds his power on patriotism.

Max Greenburg, chief of a New Jersey "beer gang," recently murdered, in the course of his professional duties, carried a list of 37 names. Opposite some he had written "don't try"; opposite others "O. K." He wrote numbers and makes of automobiles used by the 37. And, it may interest you mildly, all were names of gentlemen on the government payroll supposed to enforce prohibition. What could the "O. K." and the "don't try" mean?

ROOSEVELT ASKS SENATE FOR SPEEDY ACTION

Poll Shows 67 to 28 for Currency Expansion Despite G. O. P. Drive

MONEY SITUATION

1—Andrew W. Mellon, former U. S. Treasury Secretary and recently returned from London, where he was American ambassador, slipped quietly into Washington overnight to lead the fight against President Roosevelt's emergency "money bill." He joined former Secretary Ogden L. Mills in heading the Republican old guard opposition to the measure.

2—Democratic leaders declare the opposition is futile, that a secret poll of the Senate shows 67 to 28 in favor of the administration program, and that it will go through with flying colors by next Wednesday as a rider in the farm relief bill.

3—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister MacDonald of Britain continue discussions of world finance. Ex-Premier Herriot of France due in Washington tomorrow and word from his ship says the French delegation accepting the U. S. abandonment of gold in a "sporting spirit" will strive for success of Washington parley.

Washington, April 22—President Roosevelt advised administration leaders on Capitol Hill today he wished prompt enactment of the currency expansion bill in order to be better prepared to conduct negotiations with foreign representatives at the forthcoming economic conferences.

The President said he was ready to assume the tremendous monetary responsibilities proposed in the modified bill.

Under its latest terms he would be empowered to use the Federal Reserve System for expanding and contracting the currency, to issue $3,000,000,000 in U. S. notes in expanding the currency, to remonetize silver at any ratio he deemed fair, and to reduce the gold content of the dollar, not to exceed 50 per cent.

MELLON, MILLS LEAD FIGHT

Opposition to the bill was militant, but numerically weak. It came almost exclusively from the Old Guard conservative Republicans, who were encouraged by the arrival here of Former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, to assume a quiet leadership of the fight against the bill, with his former assistant secretary and later secretary, Ogden L. Mills.

A statement was issued by Senators Reed of Pennsylvania and Walcott of Connecticut, House Minority Leader Snell and Represen-

NEW MOVE TO END LEATHER WALKOUT

Hope for Settlement Increases as Parleys Are Resumed

The Danvers home of a Peabody leather worker was stoned early today in the only demonstration of strikers attendant to the opening of the Peabody mills.

The home was that of Thomas Zuk, 43, of Elliott st., Danvers, who did not walk out with other employes at the National Calfskin Tanneries when strikes were declared at Peabody.

Zuk said the stoning broke five windows and terrified members of his family, who were startled at the sudden crash that woke them up.

In the Peabody section, unlike last night's milling of 2000 that brought si xarrests, conditions were quiet.

Police laid the change partly to reports that state troopers were redy to enter the strike area, and partly to the prospects of settlement at the hands of a citizens committee appointed by Mayor J. Leo Sullivan.

Police Chief Edward F. Pierce said he asked for 20 troopers from the state force but that they had not been granted him.

In the hope of reaching a settlement over the weekend, Mayor Sullivan appointed to his committee Judge Daniel C. Manning, former Mayor Robert A. Bakeman, Elwyn C. Armstrong, union leader; Timothy J. O'Keefe a retired leather worker, and William J. Staples, a retired coal dealer.

Blast Rips Roof Off Home

Cranston, R. I., April 22—A mysterious blast, followed by fire, demolished a one-family dwelling in Dunedin st., early today and aroused the entire district.

Damage to the house, which was a total loss, was estimated at $10,000. Police started an investigation owing to the suspicious nature of the explosion.

Police said that when they reached the scene they found the owner, Francesco Turri, his wife, and her three children by a former marriage, Joseph, 20, Ralph, 18, and Angelina Ronci, 16, standing in the street fully clothed.

The blast occurred at 2:45 a. m. and police decided to hold the family at headquarters pending the completion of the investigation. Turri told them that they were aroused by the blast, dressed hurriedly and left the house, but officials were inclined to doubt this story.

The explosion blew the roof off the dwelling, broke all the windows, and was followed almost immediately by the fire, which razed the structure. Residents of homes in a half-mile radius were aroused by the blast and rushed from their homes in terror. They returned after the blaze in the Turri home was under control.

DIVORCEE HAS BATTLE WITH THIEVES

Police Capture One After Chase; Money Is Recovered

Two youths, alleged to have beaten and robbed a South Boston divorcee in her home, were chased nine miles under police gunfire early today before one escaped and the other was arrested.

Police said the pair entered the home of Mrs. Margaret Moynihan, 35, at 4th West Second st., South Boston, and were fleeing with $45 in her pocketbook when she grappled with them.

Blows on the face forced Mrs. Moynihan to release the hold she had on one of the youths but she followed them out the door and caught the registration of a car that had been reported as stolen from Jeremiah J. White of Eliot ave., Quincy.

SOUNDS ALARM.

Clad in a bathrobe over her night clothing, Mrs. Moynihan raced to Dorchester st. and Broadway to sound a citizen alarm. At nearly the same time, White's car was sighted on Dorchester st. by Patrolmen John F. Petitti and Edward Shea, who were in a prowl car.

The pursued car swerved from Dorchester st. into West Seventh st. to Andrew sq., Boston and Clapp pl., to Massachusetts ave. and Albany st., where a turn into the city yards proved disastrous.

The car crashed into a pole, and one man fled into the darkness about the wharves. The other youth proved to be Paul B. Greatrix, 26, of East Eighth st., South Boston.

FIND POCKETBOOK

Police said they found the pocketbook of Mrs. Moynihan in the car with the money intact. They charged Greatrix with larceny of the pocketbook and larceny of the car. A warrant for assault will be sought in South Boston Court.

Police said the identity of the escaped man was known, and that they expected to arrest him soon.

Japs Halt Big Drive on Chinese South of Wall

Tokyo, April 22 (AP)—The war office announced today that Japanese troops have been ordered to cease their attacks on, and halt their pursuit of, Chinese troops south of the great wall of China.

The campaign south of the wall, it said, has gained all objectives—the termination of Chinese pressure on the southern boundary of Jehol province and the pushing of the Chinese beyond artillery range of the wall. The campaign began officially April 10, more than a month after the seizure of Jehol.

A War Office spokesman said the Chinese have been expelled entirely from the district eastward of the Lwan River and also from a zone extending an average depth of ten miles below the wall west of the Lwan River as far as the Miyun area.

The triangular area east of the river, which cuts through the wall, extends nearly 100 miles to the sea and about 80 miles, at its base, along the seacoast.

The occupied section along the wall to the west of the river extends another 100 miles inland. Recent air bombings were believed to have scattered Chinese concentration at Miyun, 35 miles northeast of Peiping, below the western end of the Jehol border.

Without seeking Chinese agreement, the Japanese army intends to maintain a neutral zone in this area thus cleared, it was stated. Any Chinese troops attempting to re-enter will be bombed by Japanese planes. If this fails, infantry operations will be renewed.

The Japanese command believes the Chinese are unlikely to attmpt to reoccupy the zone. The Japanese intends to hold the present lines only a little longer, they said, until there is no likelihood of fresh Chinese attacks.

GUARDS FIRE IN LEVEE FEUD

Belzoni, Miss., April 22 (AP)—National Guardsmen early today brought their guns into play along the Yazoo river levees south of here and watched alertly as a renewal of the feud between warring flood-threatened delt farmers appeared imminent.

Scores of shots were fired by the troops after three mysterious dynamite explosions and the chugging of elusive motorboats in the darkness were heard along the river.

Maj. T. D. Birdsong sent all available guardsmen to the levees shortly after midnight. Later, numerous shots were heard up and down the 10-mile sector south of Belzoni.

The flood-wracked area hereabouts first grew tense Tuesday when an armed force of farmers overpowered guards at the Chute bridge near Glendora and dynamited the levee there, releasing water that threatened their farm lands.

ANGLO-AMERICAN ACCORD AIM OF MacDONALD

PREMIER TALKS 2 HOURS WITH ROOSEVELT

Visitor Refuses to Entertain Enmity on Gold Question

Washington, April 21 (AP)—From the first Roosevelt-Macdonald conference there emerged today a mutual understanding of viewpoints, clearing the way, possibly, for definite progress toward rehabilitating the world's financial and economic structure.

In a talk that stretched far into the night, President Roosevelt and his week-end guest, Prime Minister Ramsay Macdonald, of Great Britain, explored the entire range of international financial and commercial problems. They talked alone together, with even their most intimate advisors barred.

AGREE TO CO-OPERATE

Points which took on increasing clarity in the wake of their discussion were these:

A willingness on the part of Great Britain to discuss stabilization of world currencies on a revised international standard.

A pledging by Great Britain to the view of the American government that the question of war debt revision is only one phase of the broad economic picture, in which currency stabilization and reduction of trade barriers bulk large.

A refusal on the part of MacDonald to entertain enmity or any thought of retaliation because of President Roosevelt's action in taking the United States off the gold standard while his guest was on the high seas.

A mutual agreement upon the importance of Anglo-American co-operation to end the tragic era of falling prices and widespread unemployment.

AWAIT HERRIOTT

The arrival tomorrow of former Premier Edouard Herriot of France stirred conjecture meanwhile as to whether his attitude would prove as conciliatory as that of MacDonald toward the sudden abandonment of the gold standard. The move left France the one major nation still clinging to gold.

Losing no time in getting their heads together, MacDonald and Roosevelt sat down in the President's study within three hours of the guest's arrival and gave themselves to a heart-to-heart discussion of the ills which affect their nations and the world.

CONFER FOR TWO HOURS

It was well on toward midnight before either noted the passage of time sufficiently to think about bed. For more than two hours they had talked, intimately and frankly. Upon what they learned of each other's views will be based whatever definite accomplishments can be worked out in the five remaining days of MacDonald's stay.

For both, the next step was consultation with their economic and financial experts. An impressive assemblage of advisers accompanied MacDonald to Washington.

Concrete decisions are expected to take shape tomorrow when the President and his guest will seek even more complete seclusion than is possible here, stealing away aboard the department of commerce boat, Sequoia, for a cruise down the Potomac.

DRASTIC SOVIET EMBARGO HITS BRITISH SHIPS

Moscow Reprisal Ban on All Imports Is Surprise to London

Moscow, U. S. S. R., April 22 (AP)—Soviet Russia, striking back today at Great Britain, ordered a complete embargo on British goods and drastic measures against British shipping.

Heralding the possible approach of an economic war of historic proportions, the Soviet government's decree will become effective Wednesday if Britain goes through with its plan to invoke an 80-per cent embargo on Russian goods on that date.

TERMS OF DECREE

The decree will remain in effect, it was announced, as long as the British restrictive measures may continue.

Foreign circles here had expressed expectations that the two British engineers, whose imprisonment on charges of sabotage and espionage started the trade war, would be released and deported within a week. A formal petition asking that the prison sentence be cancelled or commuted to deportation, presented by their Russian attorneys, was before the Soviet central executive committee.

It was considered likely that of the men, William L. MacDonald and L. C. Thornton, are released, England will call off its embargo, thus ending the trade controversy.

DECIDED THURSDAY

The decree prohibit any purchases in England or the chartering of cargo vessels flying the British flag. They also impose restrictions on British goods in transport through Russia, reduce to a minimum the use of British ports and levy increased duties on British ships entering Soviet ports.

Britain Surprised by Soviet Action

London, April 22 (AP)—The British public was surprised today by the announcement of Soviet Russia's retaliatory embargo on Great Britain's recent embargo proclamation against that country.

No intimation that Russia would take such measures had been made here previously. She announced full embargo against British goods and restrictive measures against British commerce and shipping were viewed as much more serious than the British action against Russia.

We would like to explain this gold standard to the man in the street but we can't catch one.

And all we found out is the most profound lecturer on the dollar hasn't got one to illustrate the subject.

UNIFICATION OF RAILROADS IS NOW SOUGHT

Government Control Preferred to Regional Zoning

Washington, April 21—That there may be a last-minute change in the program of railroad co-ordination, became known today.

Strong pressure, it was learned, is being brought to bear to persuade President Roosevelt to drop any plan of regional zoning, for the purpose of consolidating railroad activities.

There is a strong swing in sentiment among some of the administration's advisors for the advocacy of a single unified railroad system under government control.

SUBMITS REPORT

The plan for the co-ordination of railroad operation, under the regional zone system, was referred to Secretary of Commerce Roper several weeks ago. Roper's report, it was learned, has been submitted to Secretary of the Treasury Woodin.

Opposition to the proposed program of ordinating railroad management without, at the same time, eliminating duplication in control, followed conferences held here earlier in the week between Secretaries Roper and Woodin and economic experts who have specialized for years in the problem of the railroads.

Objections to the present plan of regional management are based on several grounds.

FALL SHORT

First, while it is admitted that there may possibly be a saving of $150,000,000 effected, which it is conceded would be most helpful, it is contended that even so large a sum as that will fall far short of saving the railroads.

Again, it is admitted, even by those advocating the regional plan of co-ordination, that it will require months to effect. And it is the feeling that there are not months to be spent if the roads are to be saved.

In pressing for reconsideration of the railroad program, it is contended that the loss to the investors of the nation will be far less than a unified transportation system controlled by the government, than under the present proposal to scale down the roads' capital structures.

Further conferences on the railroad problem are to be held here next week or immediately following the conclusion of the forthcoming economic parleys.

FATHER AND SON IN BRIBE CASE

Brockton, April 22—A father and son will be arraigned in court here today, the former on a bribery charge and the youth, a high school football star, for assault in his attempt to rescue his father from the arresting officers.

The father, Joseph Sulesky, of Hovendor ave., will be charged with the attempted bribery of City Councilor Rudolph Caldwell. He was arrested in the latter's Sparks st. home last night after officers, in another room, had listened to a conversation he had with the councilor.

As the officers were leading him from the house, his son, Peter Sulesky, 19, high school football and track star, drove up and asked what the trouble was. Acting Inspector Clarance J. Irving in turn asked to see his driving license and registration.

While the officer was examining the papers, the youth is alleged to have punched him in the nose and followed with blows to the chin and forehead. Irving pounded young Sulesky in the mouth and then ordered him to handcuffed him to his father.

They were placed in adjoining cells in police headquarters. A short time later they were released on bail, the father in $200 and the son in $300.

Mellon Heads Fight on Inflation Measure

tative Luce of Massachusetts, declaring:

"The bill violates the most elementary principles of sound monetary, credit and financial policies."

Senator Reed, however, gave a pledge that he would not filibuster against the bill. This was after Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, served notice he would invoke the cloture rule limiting debate if a filibuster was attempted.

Advocates have the votes to pass the bill, Robinson was assured by a secret poll, showing 57 to 38 in favor of it.

The active leaders are former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills and Senator Reed (R.) of Pennsylvania. Reed denounced the bill on the Senate floor. Mills and Reed face defeat, however, since they could make no real progress in organizing strong opposition.

SILVER AMENDMENT

The silver amendment was introduced by Senator Wheeler (D.) Montana, whose motion to remonetize silver at a 16 to 1 ratio was barely beaten earlier in the week and led to immediate presentation of the inflation program by the administration. Senator King (D.) Utah, joined Wheeler in drafting the new amendment at the President's request.

The President would be authorized to remonetize silver at any ratio he saw fit to stabilize domestic prices or protect American commerce against depreciated foreign currencies.

After authorizing the President to reduce the gold content of the dollar, the amendment read:

"And also to fix the weight of the silver dollar in grains ninetenths fine at a definite fixed ratio to the gold dollar at such amounts as he finds necessary from his investigation to stabilize domestic prices or to protect the foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies and to provide for the unlimited coinage of such gold and silver at the ratio so fixed."

PASSAGE BY WEDNESDAY

It appeared the farm bill, to which the currency expansion measure is attached, would pass the Senate by Wednesday.

The Senate agreed to vote before 5 p. m. today on the Frazier substitute for the administration's farm mortgage refinancing section of the farm bill. The substitute, offered by Senator Frazier (R.), North Dakota, would provide for refinancing of farm debts at 1½ per cent interest through a currency and bond issue.

These votes would virtually complete debate on everything save the currency expansion plan advanced yesterday by Senator Thomas (D.), Oklahoma, with the backing of the administration.

The Federal Reserve Board is waiting for passage of the bill before acting on suggestions it authorize federal reserve banks to buy bonds in the open market as an inflationary move, it was learned.

William Green, president of the Federation of Labor, issued a statement urging workers to begin an immediate fight for increased wages to offset the rising prices through currency inflation and abandonment of the international gold standard.

From Edward A. O'Neil, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, came a statement praising the President's action in taking the nation off the gold standard and favoring adopting of the Goldsborough bill providing for a revaluation of gold.

London Is Told France Will Quit Gold Basis

London, April 22 (AP)—Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail declared today that payment of Great Britain's war debts to the United States is now impossible.

The paper said the abandonment of the gold standard by the United States made it "entirely beyond our power to continue the payment of the debt instalments. ... ...

A belief by high financial authorities that France will quit the gold standard was reported in the Daily Herald. Its financial writer claimed information that the Bank of England has begun to sell francs it acquired during the conversion of the exchange equalization fund.

This government fund was used to support both the dollar and the franc since England's departure from the gold standard but ceased to support the dollar after the United States left a gold basis.

FACTOR DUPED KIDNAP GANG

Chicago, April 22 (AP) — The strategy by which John Factor, international speculator, claims he out-guessed the kidnapers of his son, Jerome, was revealed as the state's attorney's police continued ebri hunt for the youth's abductors today.

Reiterating a previous statement that he did "not pay a cent" of ransom, the elder Factor said that his entire campaign to get his boy back was devoted to a plan of creating dissension among the kidnapers.

After the first ransom note was received by Factor, another himself, asking for $50,000, pretended that it had been received from the abductors and had it published in the newspapers. His idea, he said, was to trick the kidnapers into believing that one of their own number was "double-crossing" the others.

Factor also said that his next step was to enlist the services of six alleged henchmen of Al Capone, and that when the six were arrested in a hotel while examining photographs of suspected kidnapers, he was confident this news caused the kidnapers to fear possible retaliation.

Nazis Name Feder Engineering Head

Berlin, April 22 (AP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Nazis took over the leadership of the nation's engineering life with the appointment of Gottfried Feder, creator of the Nazi party program, as president of the Reich's "technical Society" which represents 80 professional scientific organizations.

MOEUR UNABLE TO SAVE RUTH

Phoenix, Ariz., April 22—Gov. B. B. Moeur and his predecessor, George W. P. Hunt, seven times chief executive of Arizona, today had expressed unqualified opposition to capital punishment.

"The authority to commute Wilbur Willis Judd's sentence is not in my hands, but I am unquestionably opposed to capital punishment. I cannot believe in taking away anything I cannot give back," said Gov. Moeur.

"Hells Bells! of course I'm against it, and always will be," said Hunt. "I have never qualified my opposition to capital punishment. As governor of Arizona I spent years in efforts to abolish it, and finally did abolish it—but they put it back over my head."

Hunt, as governor, granted many commutations and, paroles. To him, by the power of legislature created the present board of pardons and paroles and vested it with the power of life or death over condemned prisoners.

Lindy and Anne Rest at St. Louis

St. Louis, April 22 (AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh rested today in St. Louis preliminary to continuing a westward inspection flight on routes of the Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc.

The colonel's arrival from Indianapolis assumed the proportions of a home-coming. It was here that the first man to fly solo across the Atlantic ocean conceived the idea of the flight.

MILLIONS FOR LIBBY'S BABY

Concord, N. C., April 22 (AP)—An agreement whereby the infant son of Libby Holman Reynolds and his half-sister, Anne Cannon Reynolds, 24, would each receive $2,000,000 of the estate of Smith Reynolds, their father, was disclosed here.

Details were contained in a letter written by W. N. Hendren, Winston-Salem attorney for the millionaire Reynolds tobacco family.

The letter was made part of the answer of Mrs. Joseph F. (Annie L.) Cannon, co-guardian of little Anne, to a complaint filed by the Cabarrus Bank and Trust Co., of Concord, joint guardian, seeking to compel her to become party to a legal action to invalidate the agreement by which the baby girl's claim to her father's estate was renounced for $500,000.

Bandit Pair Get $15 in Store Theft

Fields Corner police today were searching for two holdup men who ran wild on the division early last night. The pair entered the Geneva ave. store of Peter Lee and secured $15 without any trouble. They made their escape just as easily in the crowded section.

Rivalry Makes Beer Cheap

St. Joseph, Mo., April 22 (AP)—Rival beer sellers here increased the size of the glasses until one place now offers twelve ounces of brew for a nickel.

Ruth Twists Handkerchief as Counsel Argues Fate

Florence, Ariz., April 22 (AP)—Winnie Ruth Judd's sanity hearing was resumed here today after Superior Judge E. L. Green ended plans for a night session last night by recessing.

The reason assigned in the order for the recess was "physical inability of County Atty. Charles Reed to prepare and present his argument to the jury."

Announcement of the order was made by Wiley Parsons, deputy clerk of the court, who said the motion for continuance was made by the State before Judge Green in his chambers.

While Mrs. Judd sat in the courtroom nervously twisting her handkerchief about one hand, State counsel insisted in the judge's chambers that he specifically warn the jurors that they should not consider that Mrs. Judd is under sentence of death and that the verdict will decide whether she is to die.

Both sides in the conflict to determine whether the blonde slayer shall be hanged or be committed to an asylum, agreed not to call further witnesses.

Under the law an unanimous decision by the jury is not necessary, any nine of the jurors may return a verdict.

Here's an Officer Who Has Won 3 Pals for Life

When a man's work is mostly on the seamy side of life, it's a relief for him to spread a little sunshine when he can.

This was the policy of George A. Morrissey, whose job as clerk of the Dudley st. police station brings him in contact with a large portion of life's pathos.

A recent lunch hour found him watching a sandlot baseball game at William E. Eustis Playground and also drew him to three forlorn looking boys on the sidelines.

"We ain't got no bat and ball and the rest won't let us play," the youngsters explained.

George solved the problem with purchase of a bat and ball, then went back to his work of recording the gloomy police happenings.

AIR VET SAYS HOPE STILL EXISTS FOR SOME OF AKRON CREW

GLENN MARTIN SAYS MEN MAY BE IN AFRICA

Air Expert Points to Failure to Find Bodies

Baltimore, April 22 (INS)—There is a faint possibility a sizable section of the ill-fated naval airship Akron is still "free ballooning" somewhere out-of-range of the steamer lanes or may have reached some distant land with many of its missing crew alive.

This fantastic suggestion—admittedly a long-shot chance—was put forward today by Glenn L. Martin, veteran aeronautical expert, in an interview with International News Service.

"FREE BALLOONING"

Martin supported his theory with the following facts:

None of the bodies of the 60-odd missing members of the crew have been recovered despite the thorough search of the ocean vicinity where the dirigible crashed into the sea during a storm on April 4.

Diving operations on the floor of the ocean off New Jersey have failed to disclose the main walk of the airship.

In the breaking-in-two of the naval dirigible Shenandoah, in Ohio, in 1925, most of the crew saved their lives by "free ballooning" in a section of the disabled airship.

There was enough food and water aboard the Akron for those a floating section to live for weeks.

Referring to the recovery of the control car and fragments of the Akron wreckage in water only 100 feet deep by naval divers, Martin said:

MAY BE IN AFRICA

"You can't hide the Akron in 100 feet of water. The most thorough search of the navy has failed to uncover other bodies which strengthens my theory that the ship may have arisen after the crash in the sea and floated away.

"The ship could have free-ballooned out of range of the steamer lanes and may have come to rest even as far away as Africa. There is even a faint possibility that some of the crew may be found alive.

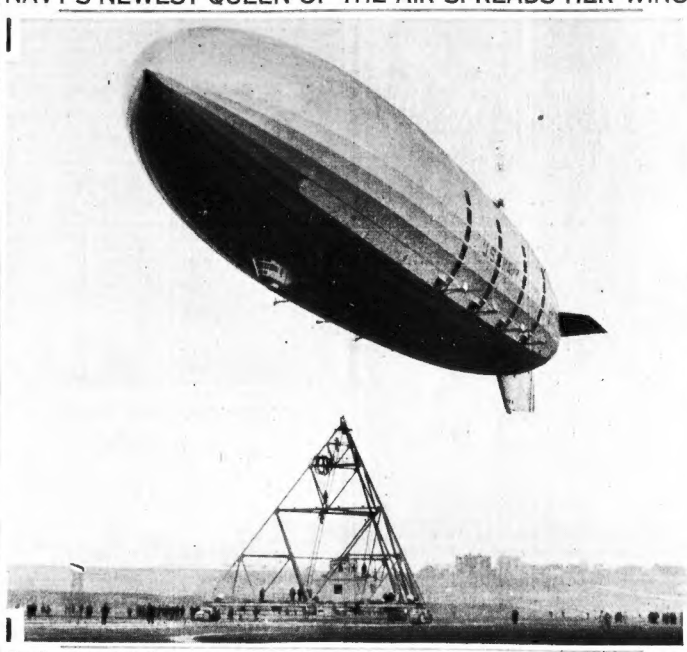
"The Akron experienced its mishap where the water was 100 feet deep. This, together with the fact that the airship was 130 feet in diameter and over 800 feet long, make it hard to believe that she sank in the location where she first struck the water.

NO GREAT IMPACT

"The Akron did not crash the water with an impact. I believe it touched the water with no more violence than if you toss a biscuit into the water. The biscuit doesn't break up. Neither did the Akron."

Martin pointed out that the parts found by divers came out of the grip of the down current of air which forced its descent and could then rise to an altitude of about 10,000 feet through the release of additional ballast, Martin suggested.

NAVY'S NEWEST QUEEN OF THE AIR SPREADS HER WINGS



The Silvery Queen of the Air, the Macon, successor in the navy air fleet to the ill-fated Akron, is shown as it soared aloft from a portable mooring mast at Akron, Ohio, yesterday for its first flight. The flight was the first of a series of trials before the ship is accepted by navy officials. The Macon cruises for more than 13 hours over Ohio before returning to the airdock at Akron. Officials described the flight as a complete success. (International News Photos.)

TRIO ON STAND IN GIFT FAMILY INQUIRY

Invested $6075 With Return of $3025, They Claim

Hearing of the petition to have Mrs. Florence C. Hascall, of Newton, indicted in the alleged "gift family" swindle in Middlesex Court, adjudged bankrupt, has been continued until a later date before Referee Charles R. Ryan.

Tstimony of four witnesses was presented at proceedings before Referee Ryan at the Federal building yesterday. Other witnesses will present evidence at the later hearing.

The witnesses yesterday were a married woman and a young man, members of the so-called gift family, and the attorney for the latter. Their testimony revealed they had invested a total of $6075 in the scheme in hope of receiving a promised profit of 50 per cent in three months. Instead they have received a total of $3025 on their original investment, which they have tried persistently to have returned to them.

The witnesses all admitted they were of the opinion that Mrs. Hascall had acted in good faith. They also declared it was their opinion Mrs. Hascall was sincere in her belief a wealthy man was behind the proposition. They were unable to identify the man beyond the statement that he was a wealthy electrical contractor.

Mrs. Hascall was not present at the proceedings. Her attorney, David Greer, said she was too ill to attend but that her condition was showing such improvement that he believed she might soon be able to appear in Middlesex court to answer to criminal charges there.

Those who testified yesterday were William R. Cook of Watertown, Mrs. Alma W. Hermes of Belmont and Attorney Edward E. Crockett of Arlington, counsel for Cook.

$72,000 Out Now

The marriage of Mrs. Louise M. L. French of Cambridge to the late Richard S. Stearns, Boston real estate operator, cost her just $72,322. A Supreme Court decision yesterday declared that her wedding nullified her right to a "daughter's" share in the estate.

WEDDING COSTS WIDOW SHARE OF FORTUNE

Supreme Court Orders Entire Stearns Estate Paid to Sons

Four sons of the late Richard S. Stearns, Boston real estate operator, will divide the entire $325,646 will of their father, due to a decision of Massachusetts Supreme Court which reversed a superior court award of $72,322 to Mrs. Louise Marie Lechat French of Cambridge.

Mrs. French, who went through a marriage ceremony with Stearns and later admitted it illegal, sued on the ground that she was promised a fifth of the estate for services as a "dutiful and loving daughter" of the 72-year-old realty man.

Mrs. French, who is a native of France, first met Stearns at Coronado Beach, Cal., in the summer of 1925. She had previously been married and divorced in France and later married Samuel French, captain in the United States Navy.

Shortly after the young divorcee met Stearns, her army husband was granted a California divorce.

In the Supreme Court decision it was held that the voluntary entrance of both parties into the marriage, whether it was legal or illegal, nullified the agreement for one-fifth of the estate as a "dutiful and loving daughter."

MACON TO FACE NEW TESTS

Akron, O., April 22 (AP)—Uncle Sam's new Goliath of the air, the U. S. S. Macon, her performance pronounced by her builders "better than we could have hoped for," tested again today in the airdock where she and her predecessor, the wrecked Akron, were built.

Now a veteran of 13 hours in Northern Ohio skies, the silvery airship probably will receive her second test tomorrow if weather conditions are favorable. Her cruising radius, held to within 50 miles of Akron on the "shakedown" flight yesterday, probably will be enlarged although Capt. Alger H. Dresel declined as usual to outline

Swanboats Out Just to Prove Spring Is Really Here

(Pictures on Page 8)

In New England, spring comes when the first hawthorn blooms, in France they know that the vernal season is on them when the first open carriage rolls down the Champs Elysees. But in Boston spring is here when children turn to The Common for play. And spring is here.

From all over town, Boston flocked to the Common yesterday and today. Children waded in the frog pond while old men sunned themselves on the benches. The unemployed lay about stretched on the warm grass. Even they looked a bit cheered.

Baseball games were in progress. A few leather lunged Reds played to a small audience. The grass was emerald under the warm sunlight.

Clatter and noise echoed over the Common, which all winter lay quiet except for the steps of office workers hurrying home. "Gilchs chawkilt covered ice cream," shrilled through the air. And the tintype men cried their wares.

Over in the Public Gardens the swanboats floated smoothly over the pond. The children of the rich played on the mall as riotously as those of the poor on the other side of Charles st.

The whir of a grass cutter rose through the air, and the sunseemed to mute the noise of traffic into a dull undertone. Spring is here.

LEGION POST TO FIGHT OUSTER

The Crossup-Pishon Post, American Legion, is expected to fight charges, formally preferred against their organization by the overwhelming vote of the executive committee of the State Department of the Legion last night.

Twenty of 21 members of the executive committee voted in favor of preference of the charges which assert generally, that the Crossup-Pishon Post is guilty of conduct unbecoming a Legion post. In the event the charges are sustained the charter of the post, which is made up for the greater part of advertising men, could be suspended or revoked.

The charges brought against the post result from the unanimous action of that group last March 27 in placing themselves squarely behind President Roosevelt's economy program and condemning the attitude of State Commdr. James P. Rose in the same matter.

3 IN RACE FOR THAYER'S SEAT

Two Democrats and a Republican loomed today for consideration of appointment to the Superior Court bench in place of the late Judge Webster Thayer.

John E. Swift, of Milford, recently defeated in the contest for lieutenant-governor, and Vincent Brogna, Boston attorney, are of Gov. Ely's political affiliations. The Republican, said to sponsored by Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon, is George Avery White of Worcester.

Brogna carries the endorsement of former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald. White was recently appointed conservator for the Worcester Bank & Trust Co.

In circles close to the governor it was learned that respect for the service of Judge Thayer in the Sacco-Vanzetti case will delay appointment of a jurist to replace him.

New Bedford Slayer Seeks New Trial

6 Women; 2 Men Held in Show Raid

Brockton, April 22—Six Boston girls and two men were held for district court today following a raid on the Brockton Veterans' Club in which an alleged improper show was staged last night.

The girls gave their names at Hattie L. Cave, of Boylston st., Back Bay; Florence Breen, of Main st, Charlestown; Fay Gail, of Harvard ave., Boston; Bebe Mc-Swain, of West Springfield st., South End; Sadie Farrell, of Tremont st., South End; Elizabeth Simonie, of Massachusetts ave., South End, all of whom are in their twenties.

The men were Earl R. Rosswell, 43, of Bowdoin st., Dorchester, and Lewis Littlefield, 34, of Boylston st., Back Bay.

MANITY BARES CULT SECRETS

Whether or not Hugh Manity, head of the Cathedral of the Cosmos in Back Bay, practiced medicine illegally will be determined Monday by Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of Municipal Court.

Manity denied that he diagnosed ailments or prescribed medicines. He added that he frowned on the title of "doctor" that many of his followers insisted upon attaching to his name.

GUSTIN SEARCH A FAILURE

Developments in the search for Steve Wallace, alias Gustin, and Frank Sullivan, for whom a futile hunt was conducted in Providence yesterday, were expected momentarily by police today.

A tip to Police Supt. Crowley yesterday resulted in Sergt. James V. Crowley and Detective Thomas J. Conaty being sent to the Rhode Island city. The search was fruitless.

CAPTOR OF MATA HARA DIES

Cannes, France, April 22 (AP)—Commandant George Ladoux, the captor of Mata Hari, woman spy of the World War, is dead.

The former head of the French espionage service never disclosed how he obtained the information which led to the dancer-adventuress before a firing squad, although he wrote numerous books on counter-spying.

It was known he labored many months collecting evidence against the woman. Ladoux himself was arrested on treason charges in 1929 but was acquitted.

VET LEADERS TO GREET CHIEF

Visiting national officers of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, headed by Admiral Robert E. Coontz, U. S. N., retired, will begin their second active day here as guests at a breakfast given them by Mayor Curley at Hotel Statler.

At noon they will be guests of Gov. Ely at luncheon at Hotel Copley-Plaza and tonight a banquet will be tendered them by the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Hotel Bradford. Today will be Boston Day for the veteran organization and a fitting program has been planned.

Admiral Coontz returned here from Springfield where he had been the guest of the Veterans of Foreign Wars from posts all over Western Massachusetts. Tomorrow his day will be devoted to visiting various veteran hospitals in the New England area.

REMOVAL OF EYE WAITS REPORT

New York, April 22 (AP)—At the clinic in which a delicate eye operation on the King of Siam was performed successfully two years ago, two-year-old Helen Vasco underwent an examination in connection with the malignant tumor on her left eye which doctors say may kill her unless removed.

The examination was made at the Institute of Ophtalmology of the Presbyterian Hospital. The results were not immediately made known.

There Dr. John H. Dunnington of Columbia University examined the Vasco child. He is assistant to Dr. John M. Wheeler, who operated on the King god Siam and who is now vacationing in California.

"It may be a day or two before the results will be known," the doctor said after the examination, adding that its chief purpose was to determine the extent of the spread of the disease.

Military Honors for Equine Vet

Portsmouth, N. H., April 22 (AP)—Tom, scarred veteran of the battlefields of Cuba, died in the Navy Yard here at the age of 41.

Tom was enlisted in the marine corps in 1894, served in Cuba as the personal mount of Col. William H. Huntington in the battles of Canagary and San Juan Hill, was wounded in the latter engagement and was retired in 1928. Tom is to be buried with military honors.

Federal Jurors Lose Out on Beer

Federal jurors, deliberating on verdicts, will not be allowed to have 3.2 beer with their meals even if the government calls it legal and non-intoxicating.

In making this rule late yesterday Col. William J. Keville, U. S. marshal, declared that federal jurors, ever before prohibition, were not allowed alcoholic drink of any kind with their meals.

VACATIONS FOR CAPTORS

Added vacations of a week each were granted two officers of the Milk st. station today for yesterday's chase of a fleeing burglar car that ended in death for one and injury to another of the Gustin Gang.

The commended police are Patrolmen George Burke and Andrew K. Adair, whose police car was twice in peril of ditching during the chase from Summer st to Harrison ave. and Bristol st.

Meanwhile, five warrants were served at City Hospital upon Coleman G. Foley, 20, of Brainton st., Dorchester, surviving member of the chased pair.

Police charged he was implicated in an attempted break at a Summer st. millinery store with James F. Johnson, 30, of Pierce ave., Dorchester, the man who was killed by a bullet of Patrolman Adair.

The other warrants charge two attempts to kill the police officers by ditching their car, possession of burglar tools and operating an auto so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

LANGONE MAY QUIT SENATE

The Massachusetts Senate was awaiting Monday's session with interest, with today as a result of the threat of Senator Joseph D. Langone, of Boston, that he would resign from the body at that time.

The aggrieved senator is of the opinion that certain of his fellow-senators are unfairly aligned against his bill for State regulation of wrestling, although they voted for it Thursday. He declares he will resign and seek re-election June 13, if possible. Otherwise he will run for mayor of Boston.

At the State House today the general opinion was that Langone would be unable to run for re-election June 13, if he should resign Monday. Therefore, it looks as though Boston will be voting for or against a Langone in its next mayoralty contest.

Andrew Sponsors Fishermen on White House Visit

The schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud, bound for Washington to seek government aid for the fishing industry, will pick up its coast guard escort off the mouth of the Potomac river today and expects to reach Washington tomorrow.

Monday the delegation of fishing skippers will be given an audience by President Roosevelt. At that time they will present their case, with statistics showing the destructive effects of competition by Canadian and Japanese fisheries and the perilous future for the industry unless immediate changes are made.

Rep. A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester has arranged a round of conferences with other government officials. These include Chairman Robert L. O'Brien and other members of the tariff commission, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Commissioner Bell of the bureau of fisheries and the New England Senate and House delegations.

The Thebaud set sail late last night from Cape May, N. J., where she docked yesterday to pick up New Jersey's representatives in the delegation of veteran blue water fishermen who will meet the President. They reported a steady northeasterly breeze had favored them all the way from New Bedford.

EYE TEST HOLDS KEY TO OPERATION ORDERED BY COURT

An operation ordered by a New York State judge on the eye of little Helen Vasco, will come about after all. The two-year-old Hastings, N. Y., girl arrived yesterday at the Presbyterian Hospital for an examination. Following a run-away act headed by the child's parents, the baby appeared accompanied by the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Vasco, and the baby's legal guardian, Francis Fay. It is believed that an operation would save the life of the baby.

Father of "Poison Widow" Confident of Innocence

Mrs. Jessie B. Costello of Peabody was "tried" and "acquitted" in her own home just before the Essex County grand jury returned an indictment against her for murder of her husband, it was revealed today.

The judge and jury was Andrew J. Fyfe, father of the 31-year-old widow, and constant comfort to his daughter in daily visits to her cell in Salem jail.

Even as the grand jury deliberated the strange death of Fire Capt. William J. Costello a month ago, Fyfe was locked in a room with his daughter.

He demanded to know the truth and urged that she tell him exactly what transpired on the early morning of February 17, the day Capt. Costello's body was found.

Fyfe pleaded for the truth and dwelt upon the fact that he intended to stick by her whether she killed her husband or not. He told his daughter of the Peabody gossip that ran riot about her and her dead husband.

Revealing the dramatic scene for the first time, Fyfe said today that he was then convinced that his daughter was innocent. He added that it was his advice that sent her to jail with a smile on her face.

Los Angeles, April 22—Roosevelt prosperity is having its pleasant effect on all business, Harry Cohn said today. He is just back from New York and his optimism in the face of all the deressing reports on the motion picture business, is the first good word we have had since the recent studio shutdown.

In typical Cohn fashion the head of Columbia attended the first night of "Party's Over," a play by Daniel Kusell, and brought the screen rights the same night. He is bringing Dorothy Tree, star of the stage play, from New York for the lead. Frank Borzage is reading the script and if he shares the Cohn enthusiasm he will direct it.

Goldwyn's Plans

The Samuel Goldwyns arrived in New York on the Berengaria after a holiday in Europe. They will come immediately to Hollywood to make preparations for "Androcles and the Lion," Eddie Cantor's next picture, which goes into production as early as June.

Doris a June Bride

It's a June wedding for Doris Kenyon after all. She read the script of "The Ad Man," liked the part and decided to make the picture. She and Elizabeth Allen have the feminine leads opposite Richard Dix, while the second male lead goes to Hobart Cavanaugh, who played the lead on the road in "The Show Off."

Chatter in Hollywood

No one can deny that Brian Aherne did a regular Greta Garbo while he was in Hollywood. He refused interviews and kept himself very much in the background and was seen with no one save the fair Marlene Dietrich. He said he preferred to wait until his pictures made their appearance before he did any talking about himself. Here's something interesting. Mr. Aherne leaves in a week to go to London to play the lead in "Wild December," a play by Clemence Dane, with no less a person opposite him than Diana Wynyard.

A happy family, Billy Wells and the Four Fays, all brothers and sisters despite the difference in names, will be one of the featured attractions on the new "Big 8" vaudeville show, opening at the Scollay Monday afternoon.

Second headline honors go to Milton Douglas, the hokus-pokus musician and comedian. Douglas has a company of "stooges" with him. Red Donahue and "Une," have an act called "Kicks and Kicks."

Two young girls, good looking, but of the gobby twpe, are Boice and Marsh. They call their act "After the Ride." Joe Wong is best known as the Chinese impersonator of Rudy Vallee, Russ Columbo and Bing Crosby.

Casa and Leha call their act "Two Social Errors." The "errors" referred to are in the form of knockabout stunts of all kinds. The Six Olans, offering "Physical Feats Deluxe," will be seen in acrobatic, teeter board and tumbling stunts of the most difficult type. Snell and Vernon will start the "Big 8" bill with an opening turn called "A Swing Through the Trees."

Mary Pickford's "Secrets" One of Finest Melodramas

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Secrets," featured on the Loew's State screen, is an exceedingly pleasing stretch of entertainment. Insofar as the star is concerned, and especially her breaking away from the Sweetheart of the Movies tradition of wholly light roles, the new picture is a distinct triumph. Mary Pickford may have been slipping in hold upon her fans, but she now gloriously retrieves her position. But above and beyond her, "Secrets" is a starring effort of Frank Borzage, one of the best directors at Hollywood.

This audience in which we all is undoubtedly prejudiced by Our Mary. Women giving vent to Ohs and Ahs, and exclaim, too, their admiration. Which is well enough, for it has been a "long time between drinks." If we may so refer to Miss Pickford's infrequent appearances in the cinema. In the earlier reels we behold the charm of the Mary of another era, bewitching as the New England girl loving one man and betrothed to another. She elopes; westward, over the plains she goes. Another Mary is evolving. An actress of mature power, convincing in emotional moments, restrained in the tensest tragedy of life.

In general, as the hair grays, Miss Pickford meets the demands of the years with expert treatment, as to line and gesture. So that "Secretes" will undoubtedly anchor her anew in the heart of her followers.

But the film rejoices in a technique that is striking by far than either acting or story. The theme is episodic, which is usually a handicap. It strings out through decades—from days of clipper ships in Salem harbor, cross-country in the covered wagons, pioneer days in California, cattle rustlers, and then the upbuilding of the family's fortunes.

Borzage's direction is skilled, vivid, even thrilling. Keen use of an imaginative lens helps him flop, skip and jump over the years. There's a delightful aroma about the New England scenes; then in the West, the snap and vigor of staccato punch passages, big moments that stir you deeply.

In one way this is one of the finest of sound pictures—its dialogue is unstrained, action is the word, cameras hold sway. Its brilliant stretches are those in which hardly a word is spoken.

Leslie Howard has the male lead, and one is sorry to say that he is not in his element when cast as an American pioneer. He has too little to do, anyway. In retrospect scenes are excellent performers.

Stage and Screen Above Par

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Oliver Twist" is the first run film holding the Loew's Orpheum screen on the new program, while on stage Manager Victor J. Morris presents another splendid vaudeville bill. This one is above par in entertainment value, and is headed by the great Huber, one of the most mystifying and skilled of all magicians.

The photoplay is, of course, the talkie version of the story which was so vigorously done in silent form years ago. Here, though the Dickens fundamentals as to character are not according to Hoyle, the drama is made into a most entertaining film. Little Dickie Moore is seen in the title role, a sweet and appealing figure, but not old enough to prove the Oliver of the novel. Yet the laddie gives a simple and genuinely moving performance; and even if it be not by the book in fidelity, it nevertheless is lavishly produced and in most of the roles finely acted.

Little Dickie has big names in his support. William "Stage" Boyd as Bill Sikes, Doris Lloyd as Nancy, Irving Pichel as Fagin, Alec B. Francis as Brownlow, George K. Arthur and Barbara Kent are all good.

In the vaudeville half of the show, the magician, Huber, offers an entertaining series of illusions and tricks. If anything, it seems that the recent exposures of the magician's bags of tricks added to rather than detracted from the enjoyment of Huber's repertoire.

A decidedly different rhythmic dance offering is the act presented by Sammy Lewis and Pattie Moore, the second headliners.

On the bill surrounding these acts are Buster Shaver and his Lilliputian companions, Olive and George; Fields and Gaughn offering a hodge podge of comedy, singing and dancing; Miles Ames presenting his amusing portraits of femininb types, and Boyd and Wallin in spectacular gymnastic feats. General singing by the audience is led by Mickie Alpert.

Slim Summerville and ZaSu Pitts Provide Honeymoon Mirth; Gala Stage Bill

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

What appears to have settled down into a new and formidable combination of personality in film comedy brought Slim Summerville and ZaSu Pitts to the RKO Boston yesterday in a splurge of misadventure called "Out All Night." It was an ancient theme skillfully worked out in new wrinkles—the love of a man for a maid and the always sure-fire miscalculations of simple-minded lovers on a honeymoon to Niagara Falls. As a wedding journey aflame, the trip was a perfect flop, but there was ample recompense for the faithful observer who shook with uncontrolled laughter and finished the day by rubbing aching sides.

* * *

It may be repeated that Mr Summerville and Miss Pitts make up a team that will go great distances in the widely assorted, but in this instance artfully assembled, humorous manifestations of filmdom. Carla Laemle and his Universal staff have done more than well by Mr. Summerville and Miss Pitts. A supporting cast of distinction trailed the sidelines to prod the featured principals into better deeds. As an example, Laura Hope Crewes was more than a mother to her 200-pound baby son. To Summerville she was both nursemaid and director of proper living. A chance meeting between Ronald, the over-trained invalid, and Bonny, custodian of children checked by shopping mothers in a department store, brought Summerville and Miss Pitts into what you might call romantic juxtaposition.

Zasu Pitts

* * *

Nature naturally takes its course in such matters, and a fluttering romance is born. By accident, this pair of dull-witted lovers were locked in the store and spent the night in what is advertised by the merchant as a "love nest"—three-rooms complete for $97.50. This naturally brought about an unexpected marriage, though why it should be so is not made clear. Let's put it down as good dramatic accessibility. The honeymoon was a riot. Mother ran it on the established rules of discipline as laid down at home. She adroitly arranges a separation, but not without melodramatic consequences and a great deal of hilarity. For one, I am willing to go on record and take my chances with the consequences by announcing Mr. Summerville as the most finished, gill edged boob in Hollywood.

* * *

It seems that a new vaudeville celebration is laying hands upon the RKO playhouses. This may, possibly, have some relation to the National Vaudeville Association's drive for funds to carry on its excellent benevolences. At any event, nine acts of variety divided time with the film features. Naturally, Sam Jack Kaufman held the centre of the stage with his concert orchestra, and capered playfully with the rapid succession of acts demanded by the spotlight. Among the features were the Four Sharps, radio, who have been NBC standbys; the Osaka Boys, Japanese acrobats who toss barrels around with their toes; Kay, Katya and Kay, in an assorted adagio feature that mingles fancy dancing with flashes of the rough and tumble; Bernard and Kay, in trick comedy with a song or two and Gertrude Avery and Her Boys, in as furious a dancing number as you will ever discover in a variety ensemble. And these comprised only a portion of the vaudeville exercises.

Plays Remaining

"Cavalcade," at the Metropolitan. (Second week.) The romance of the English middle class, with the World War as a background. Clive Brook, Diana Wynyard and Una O'Connor head the cast.

* * *

"Berkeley Square," at the Colonial. (Second week.) Fantasy of the past and present, with Leslie Howard in the role of a modern who finds himself in the 18th century. Heather Angel and Valerie Taylor are in the cast.

* * *

"Ah, Wilderness!" at the Plymouth. (Second week.) Eugene O'Neill's comedy of a boy's first love affair, with Richard Bennett, Mary Servoss and Conway Tearle in the cast.

* * *

"Tobacco Road," at the Hollis. (Second week.) Erskine Caldwell's story of Georgia crackers, with Henry Hull, Dean Jagger and Margaret Wycherly in the cast.

* * *

"Ann Vickers," at the Wilbur. (Second week.) Sinclair Lewis' story of a woman reformer, with Irene Dunne, Walter Huston and Conway Tearle in the cast.

* * *

"Dinner at Eight," at the Shubert. (Second week.) George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber's comedy of the rich, with Constance Collier, Jane Cowl, Lionel Atwill and Ann Andrews in the cast.

* * *

"Pigeons and People," at the Colonial. (Second week.) George M. Cohan in his own play, with Ainey Alba, Ralph Morgan and Olive Reeves-Smith in the cast.

* * *

"Hollis—The Abbey Theater Players in repertoire. The new play of the week will be Lennox Robinson's "The Big House," which will be presented on Monday night only. There will be a daily change of bill. Included in playing personnel are F. J. McCormick, Eileen Crowe, Barry Fitzgerald, Maureen Delany, Arthur Shields, May Craig, Michael J. Dolan and Kate Curling.

New Plays

COLONIAL—George M. Cohan in his own play, "Pigeons and People." A return engagement for a single week. Is billed as a comic state of mind in continuous action. Included in the supporting cast are Walter Gilbert, Arvid Paulsen, Olive Reeves-Smith and Paul McGrath.

HOLLIS—The Abbey Theater Players in repertoire. The new play of the week will be Lennox Robinson's "The Big House," which will be presented on Monday night only. There will be a daily change of bill. Included in playing personnel are F. J. McCormick, Eileen Crowe, Barry Fitzgerald, Maureen Delany, Arthur Shields, May Craig, Michael J. Dolan and Kate Curling.

"Cavalcade" Acclaimed Anew

That cinematic pearl without price, "Cavalcade," one of the greatest of all motion pictures, holds the feature place on the Metropolitan's screen this new film week. It is so good that it is a show in itself; and yet the theater's stage production currently happens to be one of its most colorful and lavish, so that Manager Hy Fine may be said to have put forth one of the best programs the house has ever had.

* * *

"Cavalcade" comes in all its roadshow glory; for, very wisely, the film has not been cut. It is unusually long, and yet so perfectly is it acted and directed, that it fairly streams along without one's being conscious of time lapse. It is one of the few lengthy pictures of which this can be said. In epic mood it is conceived and produced; it sweeps majestically through something over 30 years of time. It is movie pageantry, wherein the stirring human motivations are interwoven with big events of history; and by the magic of realistic lights and shadows, plus not-too-much dialogue, but all of it's golden, "Cavalcade" holds the eye and the ear, and at the same time stirs the heart.

The cast is one that can be called practically flawless. Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, Ursula Jeans and Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor and Beryl Mercer are a few of the number that each and all achieve stellar performance.

* * *

On stage Manager Fine presents what he terms a gorgeous episodic program, entitled "Down Thru the Ages," which depicts the "Melodic Age," offering Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" as the production overture; the "Barbaric Age" and the "Jazz Age," with a galaxy of entertainers. The presentation is divided into several units, all of which blend into the theme of the screen feature, "Cavalcade," presenting its different periods of time. The grand orchestra, with Henry Kalis conducting, and Arthur Martel, the organist, are introduced in this presentation.

ROOSEVELT DAY WINS PRAISE OF LEADERS

Two more leading citizens have endorsed the plan of the Boston American and other Hearst newspapers for observance of "President's Day" on Sunday, April 30.

They are Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel, Longwood ave. and Commissioner of Public Safety Daniel Needham.

Both men highly commend the "President's Day" idea, believing it to be of much practical value.

They praise the two-fold purpose of the movement—giving thanks for the inspiring leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and offering prayers for his continued strength of mind and body to make possible the accomplishment of the big tasks in which he is engaged for the welfare of the nation.

NEEDS PUBLICS AID

In commending the plan, Rabbi Levi said:

"No one man can save the world. No one man, not even a Roosevelt, can save America.

"The President has achieved a marvelous record since he stepped into office. But the problem of national reconstruction which faces him, involved as it is with the interests of the whole world, demands for its solution not merely all he has to offer but the prayers, the good will, the interest and, most of all, the active, whole-hearted, enthusiastic and consecrated co-operation of all the citizens of the country, our representatives in office, our men of talent and ability, of wisdom and vision, and all the rest of us, average men and women, with little genius if you will, but with everything that makes for well-being and happiness at stake.

"We need to learn to march behind and with together. Here lies our real hope."

PRESIDENT'S GIGANTIC JOB

Commissioner Needham said:

"The designation of 'President's Day' is particularly appropriate at this time. The demand of the American people for action has been accepted by President Roosevelt as a mandate. No one can but admire his initiative and forcefulness, and yet no one has ever been faced with more complicated and more complex problems.

"The inauguration of 'President's Day' will tend to make us appreciate the magnitude of the task confronting our Chief Executive. Every true American sincerely hopes that the President will have the necessary physical and mental strength to meet this great national emergency. Nothing could help him more than to appreciate that the rank and file of the people of the United States are behind him.

"The selection of the day is particularly timely as it will give every one an opportunity to assist in counteracting the radical propaganda which is being perpetrated annually on the first of May."

"Mr. Hearst and the Boston American are to be congratulated for sponsoring and promoting this idea."

BOSTON YOUTHS HELD IN CHASE

East Providence, April 22 (AP)—A 70-mile an hour chase through the streets of Providence and this town ended in the arrest of three boys in a stolen car when they drove the auto through a fence and to the brink of a 50-foot embankment overlooking railroad tracks.

The boys said they were Cyril Porter, 15, of Queensbury st., Back Bay; Thomas E. Doherty, 17, of Auburn st., Cambridge, and Thomas Martell, 16, of Audubon rd., Back Bay.

A Providence patrolman in an auto pursued them and fired three ineffectual shots at them. The car had been stolen in Cranston, near here.

THREAT NOTE WRITER HELD

Philadelphia, April 22 (AP)—Accused of attempting to extort under threat of death $100,000 from Grover Bergdoll, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck and Co., a young man was arrested here while, authorities said, he was telephoning his intended victim.

Police said the man identified himself as Charles R. Weil, 29, a clerk, unemployed for more than a year. They stated he admitted sending Rosenwald three letters.

Three letters received by Rosenwald threaten the wealthy executive with "ruthless, cruel and vicious death" unless he money was paid.

Dry 3 Centuries and Now Beer

Provincetown, April 22 — Beer went on sale today in this dryest of dry towns, with authorization of the selectmen for the first time since the Pilgrims landed in 1620 and then pushed on to Plymouth.

Four retailers and several restaurants were granted the necessary permits, the charge being $25 for resident proprietors and $50 for non-resident dicenses.

More Baptismals at Dudley St. Church

A waiting list of candidates awaiting to be baptized will take part in a Fost-Baptismal Service tomorrow morning at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Roxbury. Because of a large number of candidates—74 in all, last Sunday—tomorrow's service was made necessary.

The fourth presentation of "The Living Bible" will be given tomorrow evening at the 7:15 service. This presentation will include seven dramatic episodes in the "Life of Christ."

"After Death" Topic at Church of Christ

"Probation After Death" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 23.

The Golden Text is: "He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matthew 24:13).

Saturday and Sunday Attractions on Air

Shakespeare Anniversary Program for Tomorrow Over CBS Network

An all star cast of prominent dramatic artists will take part in the program being staged on Sunday evening to commemorate the birthday anniversary of William Shakespeare. This offering includes a scene from "Romeo and Juliet" with Jane Cowl and Rollo Peters assuming the principal roles. Otis Skinner is also featured with a recitation of Hamlet bits. New England listeners may tune it in (WAAB) between 5 and 5:30 p. m.

• • •

It happens the above time has previously been occupied by the weekly "Roses and Drums" half hour, which shifts beginning tomorrow to 6:30 p. m. And a change in stations is made as well, with the historic war episode enactments moving to WNAC waves.

• • •

Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, talks on "Financial Independence" tonight (WNAC) between 7:30 and 7:45 o'clock.

• • •

PIANO PROGRAM

Fray and Bragiotti, the CBS masters of two piano technique, are presenting a repertoire of classic selections this evening (WNAC) from 8 o'clock until 8:15.

• • •

Babe Ruth was unable to appear as per schedule (WNAC) last night at 8:30 owing to an acute throat ailment seriously affecting his speech and from which he has been suffering since Thursday.

• • •

STAGE SHOWING

Those three Hub harmony gals called "The Fashionettes" and embracing the voices of Ruth Chilton, Helen Wilson and Martha Alcott, accompanied by Caesar Pasicoli, leave the radio realm for personal appearance tomorrow at the Shawmut and Modern Theaters in Roxbury.

• • •

Ruby Newman and his orchestra features an unusual "Fair Harvard" theme throughout the Sunday night hour (WEEI) occupied by them (8 to 9) with solos by Willie Morris and Russell Dorr.

• • •

SPECIAL SPEECH

Newton D. Baker, prominent Democratic statesman and War Department head under Woodrow Wilson during the world conflict, is a speaker tomorrow evening (WAAB) at 6 o'clock.

• • •

Adrian O'Brien is slated to sing "Macushla" and "Sylvia" during the Sabbath evening airing of Hy Fine music from the Hotel Statler Saline Moderne, coming to the loudspeakers (WEEI) at 9 p. m.

• • •

STORY OF SUCCESS

Henry (Sailor) Ryan, coming to be known hereabouts as the "Radio Biographer" with his weekly "Unknown Great" series (WBZ-WBZA) on Sunday afternoons, will relate something exceptional again tomorrow, he says. It is the story of a man who was kicked around in a depressed mood for many weeks, having no money, home nor friends. He very often went hungry for days. He slept in Boston Common frequently. Later however, he set up in a cellar down New York way and was to build a business that is one of the most important of its time. In fact, it yielded the man some $750,000 annually. Sounds like a bit we'll worth lending an ear or two toward.

Lectures Planned for Hospital Fund

AN INTERESTING EVENT FOR NEXT WINTER which should appeal to all lovers of children is the course of 25 lectures by Miss Eunice Harriet Avery on "Interpretations of World Affairs" by the welfare committee of the Children's Hospital . . . unless funds can be raised for the new Bader wing of the hospital, there is a likelihood of this important unit being closed to the children, which would be a pity as it is doing such marvelous work on infantile paralysis and other serious children's diseases . . .

The lectures will be held in the Georgian Room of the Hotel Statler on successive Friday mornings beginning October 20 at 10:45. A limited number of tickets may be subscribed . . .

Mrs. Frank H. Stewart and Mrs. Samuel Warren are co-chairmen, Mrs. Richard S. Russell is treasurer and Mrs. Lawrence Black is secretary . . . an important group of public-spirited women are sponsoring these interesting lectures . . . Mrs. John G. Palfrey heads the publicity and Mrs. H. Parker Whittington is also on that committee, which assures its success . . . there is a special committee of 100 names which will be announced later.

* * *

As spring approaches and the social season for 1932-33 goes down into history, each one of us looks forward with joyful anticipation to the gaieties of the summer just ahead, forgetful of the next year's debutante season, until we raise that graduation day will soon be here and that the graduate of today will be the debutante of tomorrow . . .

In preparation for the season of 1933-34, the keeper of the calendar, Miss Mary O. Porter, of 50 River st., Boston, has been receiving new names throughout the winter and in a few short weeks the printed list of debutantes for next year will be issued. As it is most desirable that it should be as complete as possible, those who have not already sent in their names are urged to do so without delay.

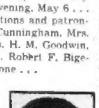
Parker, Mrs. Lewis Prouty, Mrs. Robert F. Bigelow, Mrs. Huey S. Rogerson and Mrs. Galen Stone . . .



Ruth Gibson

Mrs. George F. Bemis, chairman of the arts and interests committee of the Junior League, and Miss Ruth Gibson, chairman of the Library, have arranged a literary lecture for Tuesday, April 25, at 11, Mrs. Stephen Wentworth Gifford, Jr., will lecture on three outstanding books of the past year at the Junior League clubhouse. For her lecture, Mrs. Gifford has chosen "Sons," by Pearl S. Buck; "Death in the Afternoon," by Ernest Hemingway, and "The Fountain," by Charles Morgan . . .

* * *

On Tuesday, April 25, in the Junior League exhibition room the members' exhibition of arts, crafts and hobbies will open and continue for two weeks. Included in the hobbies group will be posters by members who are in business and who wish to advertise this particular branch of their work. This display will be open to the public.

Miss Fermar will give her fourth lecture at the next meeting of the Garden Club at the Junior League on this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The subject will be "Preparation of the Garden in Winter."

Koussevitzky Leads Orchestra

By MOSES SMITH

A remarkable cycle of Sibelius symphonies, which has included the performance, during the present season, of all of the Finnish master's excursions into this form, is completed in the current pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Serge Koussevitzky.

The last of these symphonies is the seventh, although Sibelius is said to have promised an eighth for first performance by the Boston Orchestra during the present season.

For this work, which begins in A minor and ends in C major and is in a single long movement, is a masterpiece of musical architecture, as well as an example of Sibelius at his best in the art of developing his comparatively meager thematic material. Here he uses for the most part mere scales as the basis of melody, thus reviving an art all but forgotten.

The vivid and poetic presentation by Koussevitzky and his orchestra yesterday would have received greater appreciation from the audience had it not been preceded by a much-discussed novelty—"Rebus," by the young Russian genius, Igor Markevitch—and followed by the more eloquent performance of Tchaikovsky's fifth symphony we have heard directed by Koussevitzky.

"Rebus" was a disappointment, because, most likely, it was overheralded. One notes an astonishing mastery of the orchestra and of modern harmony and polyphony; one feels a rhythmic gusto rare even in these days. But the musical ideas are curiously dry.

Dance at Brookline Home Follows Club Dinner

The formal presentation of Miss Abigail Aldrich, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Aldrich, will take place tonight at their residence, 142 Clyde st., Brookline. The event is to be a dance, preceded by an ushers' dinner given by the young lady's parents at The Country Club.

Miss Aldrich will receive her guests in a sapphire blue gown with white organdie collar and will carry a sheaf of spring flowers, while her mother will introduce her in a black silk gown wearing a corsage of white flowers. The decorative scheme selected will be of yellow and blue spring flowers with red poppies.

In Usher Group

A group of 18 young gentlemen will serve as ushers for this popular debutante, under the direction of her brother, Nelson W. Aldrich, who is a student at Lowell House, Harvard. The list includes Messrs. John W. Goodrich, Richard Wolcott, Avery Sawyer, Thomas W. Williams, Elton Clark, Jr., Guy S. Hayes, Le Grand F. Thurber, Amory F. Lawrence, Richard S. Baxter, George Peabody Hamlin, Jr., Marc Peter, Jr., Richard C. Aldrich, Eugene F. Record, Eustis Walcott, Sterling S. Adams, A. Oakley Brooks and David Crockett.

There will be a number of out of town guests including the debutante's uncle, Mr. Richard S. Aldrich and Mrs. Aldrich of Providence, with her daughter Miss Janet White and Miss Adelise Havemeyer of New York, who, with Miss White will be the honor guests of Mrs. N. Stuart Campbell of Lee st., for the week-end.

Studied Abroad

Miss Elizabeth O. Powel, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Powel of Providence is invited and will be the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Aldrich, also Miss Eloise Berland of Wilmington Del., who will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Minter of Clyde st.

Miss Aldrich, a member of the Junior League, and Vincent Club, was graduated from the Beaver Country Day school, and also studied in Florence, Italy, returning home last June with her parents after a tour through Europe. She spends much time sailing with her father who is the commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club. She is now studying at the Boston Art School.

the fashionables

By DOROTHY WHIPPLE FRY

MRS. WILLIAM L. SHEARER is looking smart with her suntan from her trip to Bermuda. She wears a light tan ensemble this spring, with a brown and tan scarf bow at her neck and a beige rough straw hat.

Miss Katharine Winthrop is a smart member of the young set. She is the daughter of Mrs. Frederick Winthrop of the North Shore and Boston. The other evening she wore a new rough crepe model with a cape fichu.

An attractive group assembled at the Egyptian Room the other evening, at an after-the-theater get-together: Miss Henrietta Young wore a frock of rose crepe, short full sleeves trimmed with dull gold, and gold threads about the neck. Her escort was Mr. Frank Lyman of Cambridge.

Miss Henrietta Clapp, granddaughter of Mrs. Samuel Adams of 90 Commonwealth ave., wore a wistaria shade evening gown, with huge, ruffled sleeves of dark purple velvet. She is spending a few days with Mrs. Adams. Her home is in Hingham. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clapp.

Mrs. Gray Pierson, the former Margaret Batchelder Sears of Milton, motored down from Fitchburg for the party, looking well in a natty grey ensemble, a pearl grey frock with a cream colored flower of velvet at the neck.

Mrs. Roger Perry of Brookline is looking snappy this spring in a smart brown ensemble.

Miss Margaret Coolidge, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. William Coolidge of Lowell House, Cambridge, was seen the other day in one of those smart black and white striped frocks that are very chic. Miss Coolidge has dark eyes and golden brown hair.

Miss Anne Houghton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Oakes Houghton of Milton, is cutting a smart figure in a brown outfit with white pique trimmings, and wee, white grosgrain bows on her saucy hat.

Miss Marjorie Dow, whose engagement to Mr. Hugh Bancroft has recently been announced, was seen the other night, her white frock trimmed with black cire satin.

Miss Grace Nelson appeared in a gorgeous white taffeta gown, covered with a black velvet coat with fox trimmings.

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

AFTER you have dipped into George Jean Nathan's little treatise on our theater, which he calls "Art Deco" (Knopf), you will be discouraged about conditions in our playhouses. For Mr. Nathan is that astute, ever-young critic who speaks the truth in a loud voice, and is fearless in exposing the buncombe and twaddle that are lauded each season after season, to a gullible and unthinking public.

* * *

MR. NATHAN does not spare anyone. He finds, since Ibsen, a dearth of originality in the theater, and he sends his darts, in sparkling and witty paragraphs, toward the type of plays that flourish because they are banal, written after a recipe that no real creative artist would venture to follow.

He vents his spleen on the ingenues who archly poke out their tummies, hop around the stage cutely in filmy negligees and indicate their adorableness by making such mouses as are beheld in real life only on the more adorable chimpanzees; and he has some fun at the expense of musical comedy performers who have been out of work for a year, who get jobs in a show that is doomed to land in the treasurer's office at the end of the first week, and who go through their dances and antics wearing spurious broad smiles, as if everything were just too gay and jolly for words. And he is heartbroken over the pseudo comedy-melodrama containing Hiram Perkins, "who believes in the Golden Rule";

Silas Stebbins, the comic-relief chore boy; Pert Ridley, "who knows a thing or two"; Jed Hoggins, the town constable; Mary Barton, the sad-eyed young seamstress, "who is strangely troubled," and Estelle Dumont, the accomplice of Gerald Blake.

He holds no brief for plays in which butlers are constantly coming in and announcing that something or other is being served in the next room, or those in which the husband piles the philanderers with Chartreuse, which peculiarly weakens the latter like so much vodka and causes him to betray to the husband, who follows his every movement with eagle eye, his rendezvous on a moonlit night in Cairo with his host's wife, Mrs. Roosevelt. Others at this hotel are Mr. Ronald W. Cordingly of Chestnut Hill, Mrs. Francis Todd and Mrs. S. T. Crawford of Reston. Mrs. Henry Hardwick Faxon of Brookline is also in New York and is at the Weylin.

Nor is he impressed with the poor but virtuous heroines who hold out against various male characters until ten minutes to eleven, and who are then rewarded for their pains with legacies having them $300,000, and with the privilege of living henceforth and forever in legal union with the star actor.

* * *

It is a diverting little book to pick up and open at random; but if you should do this just before starting for a theater you might decide to remain at home. For Mr. Nathan is an iconoclast, if there was one, and his shafts must be disturbing to managers, actors and audiences alike.

The speech was scheduled to begin at 3 p. m. In the interim the Cabinet met in agitated conclave, Secretary of Commerce Burroughs, recognized as the strongest man in the Cabinet after Gaeside, spoke first.

"Mr. Secretary of State," he said, "no man honors the President more or has tried more faithfully to serve him than I. So great is my admiration for him that, in normal circumstances, I would range myself on his side against the united opposition of this Cabinet. But these are not normal circumstances, nor is the President a normal man. It will not be President Hammond who will be sitting at the television in a short time, but some tragic changeling."

Garside turned toward him and said in his calm impersonal voice: "Have you any concrete suggestion to offer as to how your proposal might be carried out?"

THE UNHEARD SPEECH

The Secretary of Commerce hesitated some time and then, his face bent so low that nobody could see its expression, he said:

"This Cabinet must take the necessary steps to restrain the President."

It was out at last, the thing they all had felt but had not the courage to frame in words.

Garside silently polled his colleagues with a questioning glance. As his eyes met theirs, each man gave a faint nod and looked away.

The Cabinet unanimously endorsed the recommendation of the Secretary of Commerce.

* * *

It was a few minutes before 3 o'clock when I went to call the President. To my surprise he was up and dressed.

For a quarter of an hour or so he silently read through and marked parts of his speech. Before he went downstairs to the Red Room in which the television apparatus was set up, I realized that in addition to his habitual nervousness he was greatly troubled in mind.

As I held the door open for him to pass through, he spoke, more to himself than to me, "I wonder if wisdom is guiding me in this thing." I made no reply.

"Right or wrong, it is too late now. My road lies straight before me. Before God I can take no other."

The elevator dropped us down to the main floor. The President's eyes swept the great foyer as if looking for something not to be found there. Then he turned and entered the Red Room.

It was five minutes before the time. An ormolu clock on the mantel ticked off the minutes. As it struck the half-hour a ruby bulb glowed and a bluish-white radiance spread across the ground glass front of the televisor.

The President rose and seated himself before the instrument. He picked up the first page of his speech.

The ruby light changed to green.

"Citizens of the United States!" The President's clear voice rang out like a bell in the stillness.

My heart jumped into my throat. For the green light had gone out. A flicker or two and the televisor panel showed only a dull steely opaqueness.

A breakdown, a short-circuit or something. I rushed across to the desk to telephone for technical help.

The President stared at the dead televisor as in a daze. Then something seemed to flash into his mind. He pushed back his chair and stood up. I saw that his whole body was trembling. "I wonder," he commenced. A knock at the door stopped him.

THE FINAL PHASE

Garside entered the room followed immediately by Van Rassaelaer, but Garside's voice was unruffled and composed as he addressed Hammond.

"Mr. President, it is my painful duty to have to inform you that the Cabinet, holding it to be contrary to the best interests of the country, by a unanimous decision has cancelled the arrangements for your speech this afternoon."

For a moment I thought the President did not understand. He swayed a little while Garside was speaking and steadied himself on the arm of the chair.

Suddenly his face was suffused with blood as a furious anger boiled up within him. He took one quick step toward Garside, both hands raised high, fists clenched. It looked as if he were going to strike the Secretary of State. The President pulled himself up to his full height as his words rolled out like thunder: "You . . . you have . . . dared . . ." Then, without warning, he crumpled to the floor.

I rushed forward and snatched out the case of phials from his waistcoat pocket. Breaking off the end of one I revived it with my handkerchief and was about to kneel so that he could inhale its contents.

Van Rassaelaer, who had been looking with bowed head at the fallen figure whose stertorous breathing had now given way to a faint rifling sound like a file off wind, turned and placed his hand on my arm.

The world stood still. He stared down at Garside who was supporting Hammond's head on his knee. These two seemed to peer into each other's souls. No word was spoken. Garside shuddered slightly as he lowered the President's sagging head.

Tears were running down Van Rassaelaer's cheeks as he turned again to me. "No, Beek—no. Don't even try."

I glanced down at the handkerchief and phial in my hand and looked up again into his tortured face. Once more that silent denial. Then a halting whisper, "It . . . is better . . . so."

LAST TRIBUTE

My brain seemed to be frozen. Space and time meant nothing. Yet something told me he was right.

My hand dropped to my side. As from a great distance, I heard the flat thump of the phial as it fell from my cold fingers and struck the red carpet.

* * *

In Lafayette sq. a small crowd gathered. The leaden sky was darkening and the sinking sun, like a great crucible of molten metal, only accentuated the gathering gloom.

Against this solemn background the United States flag atop the White House roof hung limp and motionless round its staff.

Suddenly the flag started down—down—down. Some chance current of air caught it in its descent and the red and white stripes and then the shower of silvery stars fluttered out into view.

From Lafayette sq. rose a muffled sobbing. Half way down the staff the flag stopped. Hesitatingly men bared their heads. Here and there a woman knelt.

Once more, and this time finally, the flag sagged and drooped round its pole, shapeless, lifeless and mournful.

"SCHOOL OF CLOTHES" PLANS WARDROBES FOR AUTO TRIPS AND VACATIONS

The Better One Anticipates Her Needs, the Better She Can Plan Her Wardrobe

By Margaret Matson

DOING A GOOD JOB in wardrobe planning rests entirely upon doing a good job in anticipating one's needs, and of knowing what sort of clothes will fill them. No two wardrobes are ever alike because no two people are ever alike. Therefore we feel that the most helpful advice that we can give to all those of you who are contemplating vacation trips, is that you sit down and let your imagination run carefully over the entire trip. Try to picture exactly what you may be doing. Learn all you can about the climate and customs of the countries.

Recently we received a letter from someone who is contemplating a motor trip in October. They plan to take in Mass., Conn., New York, Penn., Ohio, and Kentucky with a few days' stay in the last mentioned. They will travel in an open roadster, stay in overnight camps when possible, eat in restaurants, and go occasionally to the theater. What should she take to wear?

In the first place the trip is in October, a month of very changeable weather. It is likely to be rather warm in Kentucky, and there doubtless will be some rather brisk days as well. In their open roadster, there will be wind and some rain. Overnight camps will require rather sturdy clothes. The nights will be quite cool. She will be sitting in the car most of each day, and yet she will not want to appear wrinkled or windblown when she steps into a restaurant. Her occasional jaunts to a theater will require daytime, and perhaps in some cases evening clothes. Her few days in Kentucky will be with friends we surmise. Therefore these are th ssuggestions that we should make. That she choose for traveling one or two suits of tweed or cravenetted wools that will resist rain and wrinkles. That she have several blouses and sweaters—some cotton or wash silk and some wool. And that she have a warm top coat. In this way, you see, she will be able to interchange the pieces to suit the weather. If the topcoat is waterproof, there will be no need of an extra raincoat. Otherwise one is quite essential. For hats, we suggest snug felts or fabrics, brimless or with narrow brims. And just here, we might caution her to take plenty of cold cream and cosmetics. Windburn and sunburn can be avoided and should be if one wishes to look well. After her travel clothes, she might have one outfit suitable for daytime or informal evening occasions. This might be a printed silk dress with its own coat of wool, and a little fabric hat to match. Bag, shoes, gloves—everything should be complete.

Plenty of underwear, of course, is essential because getting laundry done will be next to impossible. Then for her stay in Kentucky, she might tuck in a few little cotton dresses for mornings in case it should be quite warm. This should comprise all she should need. Accessories like extra scarfs, sweaters, berets, etc., can be tucked into corners and used to give more variety to the wardrobe.

This is the Boston Evening American School of Clothes. Address your questions to Margaret Matson, please.

A FASHION FAVORITE

Suits of loosely woven wools with three-quarter length coats are very popular among the smartest women of fashion this spring. It is worn by Mrs. Albert Cummins. The material of the suit is royal blue angora tweed flecked with black. Mrs. Cummins' hat is of matching blue straw fabric and her purse and gloves are black.

The Daily True Story: 'Month With Her'

"NO HONEY, we can't do it." First Grade Detective Thomas Kirnan said it regretfully, and looked up from his paper to face Molly, his wife, trim in her gingham, at the other end of the breakfast table.

He found her staring at him, surprised.

"Do what?" she asked.

"Take a month's vacation," he replied; "didn't you ask me?"

"I never opened my mouth," said Molly, "but I was thinking about it, and if you hadn't answered before I spoke I probably would have been talking about it in another minute."

"Funny," said Detective Kirnan. "I could have sworn I heard you ask. Maybe I'm a telepathic shark. I sure could use that kind of mental activity in my business."

* * *

"We've got a funny case," Captain Malloy told him, an hour later at the station. "We've got what seems to be a suicide, a woman, and yet somehow I don't quite make the corners of the jigsaw fit in place. She's picked up in the street, outside a middle-class apartment, in midtown. There's a single bullet in her head, and her finger-prints are on the gun."

"That ought to make it a suicide," said Kirnan.

"But," said the captain, "there had been five other shots fired. And we've gone over every inch of walls on both sides of the street, and there isn't a trace of any 'ther bullet mark."

"On top of that," said the captain, "we sent the gun to the ballistics bureau, and sent a lot of men to trace it. The gun belongs to 'Monkey' Mullins. You know Monkey, the leader of the elbow gang. And Sergeant Clark, in the ballistics bureau, says something else."

Kirnan leaned forward, listening closely.

"Clark says only one real bullet went through the gun. The other five were blanks. And the blanks were fired first. He gets that by the fact that the bullet that killed the girl was coated with an unusually heavy deposit of burned powder. And the inside of the barrel showed where a slug going through had swept it clean on the flanges. The chambers of the cylinder showed, too, the powder flares of the five blanks."

"Oho," said Kirnan. "Got Mullins?"

"In the back room," the captain affirmed. "We've been talking to him for four hours. You question him an hour or two, while Burke and Collins get a rest."

Three hours went by. Kirnan, according to routine, asked the gangster questions.

"What would you say, Monk," he asked, because he couldn't think of anything else to ask at all, "what would you say if a woman wanted you to do something very much, and you couldn't?"

Mullins looked at him, grunted, and said nothing.

MORE QUESTIONS

"If the woman loved you a lot, Monk, and wanted you to go away with her for a month, what would you tell her?"

"She said what?" Mullins demanded, lighting a cigarette.

"She said she'd make that month like the love story writers put in books, Monk."

Kirnan wasn't prepared for what followed. But he fended off the tigerish attack, and as his detail spent over backwards he clutched Mullins and the two of them went down in a tangled heap. Other detectives piled in and that ended that. But within half an hour after the questioning was resumed Mullins made a confession.

* * *

"You see, Molly"—Detective Kirnan was telling his wife all about it over dinner table—"when I asked him what he'd do if a girl wanted him to go away for a month to story book paradise he went for me.

"And when the scuffle was over I had a new idea and questioned him along that line. He thought I had more information than I had. And he wound up by telling it all.

SUICIDE PACT

"The girl was all caked in on him. She wanted him to quit the racket and go away. He wanted to put it over on her deal. She told him if he did she'd kill herself.

"He put five blanks in his gun and one real slug. She met him on the dock. She pulled it. She pened.

"She fired three more—and Monk dropped. Then she killed herself.

"And honey, the thing that got under Monk's hide was that she'd promised to make their month like a love story book true affair—just like you told me this morning. Funny, isn't it, how things work out?"

But when First Grade Detective Kirnan was given a month's furlough with pay, as a personal reward by the commissioner, Molly made that month just the kind of a month she'd promised over the breakfast table.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

At the Table

WHEN DINING in a restaurant, don't hesitate to ask the waiter about any unfamiliar dish listed on the menu card. It may be one used only in that restaurant—a "specialty of the house"—and that is usually a good thing to order. At any rate, the waiter will be glad to tell you, or to find out from the head waiter.

In the upper picture the girl on the right, sure of her French, is pronouncing the name of the dish she has chosen. The girl on the left can't quite "tackle" the French name, so she points to it, and asks what it is. And both are enjoying the adventure of finding out!

Directly after taking your seat at a dining table, put you napkin in your lap, then you will be ready when the waiter comes to serve you.

Miss Lady-on-the-Left in the lower picture did this, and is ready. Miss Lady-on-the-Right was so busy chatting that she didn't, so the waiter must wait until she removes the napkin from her plate.

"SHARLIE"

By Beatrice Burton

SHARLIE put her head to one side and gave him a small smile that barely moved her lips. Behind that smile she was thinking that a man—even a big business man like Mr. Collins was very easy to manage.

"I'll bet I'll have him asking me to marry him in no time at all," she said to herself with the cocksureness of a very young and lovely woman. But by midnight she had changed her mind about him. He wasn't so easy after all.

It was 11 o'clock—just seven hours after Sharlie had climbed into Mr. Collins' car and started out for the "drive into the country" that he had been promising her all week. The drive into the country had resolved itself into dinner at a roadhouse, just as Sharlie had intended that it should.

She sat facing him now across a little corner table in the Riverview Inn, a roadhouse de luxe set high on a hill some two hours' drive from town.

At the Roadhouse

All around them were the lights, the music, the blue cigarette smoke, the movement and noise and color of a restaurant and dance place at midnight. Girls, little silky-looking girls with their hats off and their smooth hair shining under the lights, danced past the corner table in their partners' arms. The girls were all young, and even the plainest of them was attractive with the bright glamour of youth and high spirits.

The men were of all ages, Sharlie noticed, watching them from under her long lashes. Two or three looked young, not more than 25 or six. Most of the others looked 10 or 15 years older than that, and some of them looked well past middle age. Old men holding their young partners tightly, as if they were trying to hang on to youth itself, like grim death.

Sharlie and Mr. Collins were tired of dancing. At least Mr. Collins had said, fully an hour before that he was a bit "winded," and Sharlie had said, "Well, let's not dance any more then."

Mr. Collins looked very tired. He looked old, too, somehow. His color had paled a little and he had lost the fresh pink clean-shaven look that he always had at the office—particularly in the early morning when he first came in. His face looked lined and slightly puffy.

"He's much too old for me," thought Sharlie. Of course she had known all along that he was—and yet—

"Tired of all this rumpus, Sharlie? Ready to go?" he asked; and he nodded.

"Yes, I'm ready to go, Mr. Collins."

She was. Somehow or other, she had not been having such a very good time. It was funny, too, when she realized that she hadn't. Mr. Collins had certainly had all the "makings" of a good time. A high-powered car, a table in the luxurious room with its mirror-lined walls and soft gilt chairs, a smooth dance floor, a "hot" orchestra, and a chicken dinner that had started with frosted fruit cocktail and wound up with crepes suzette and black coffee. Mr. Collins had brought along a flask, too, and Sharlie had several sips of the highballs he had mixed for himself.

Sharlie could look back on her short life and remember dozens of "zippier" evenings she had had. Evenings with her friends at high school. Evenings with Eddie. The one roadhouse evening she had spent with Marjorie Milliken and her boy friends.

Yes, there was no doubt that a girl had a better time with people her own age than with older men.

But—only a man with plenty of money could provide the things that Sharlie wanted so passionately just then. The right kind of automobile, the right kind of home, luxury and leisure . . . The things that Mr. Collins could give the girl he married.

"And I can marry him if I want to," she went on, talking to herself, as she powdered her little white nose before one of the mirrors in the women's dressing room on her way out of the roadhouse. She felt more sure of that tonight than ever before.

There was a perfume machine just inside the door and she stopped there for a moment to drop a dime into the slot and receive a tiny jet of perfume on one cheek. The machines in cheap roadhouses were filled with awful stuff that smelled like vanilla, she reflected, but in this Riverview Inn even the perfume was right. It was "Night in Tahiti" and it was frightfully expensive. Sharlie knew. It always had made her think of big white flowers under a moon, when she sniffed it at toilet counters.

Cheap Things

If you loved a man enough you didn't mind having to use cheap perfume and ride in a cheap car and do your own washing and ironing and cooking—but, gosh, you'd have to love him . . . you wouldn't you?

"And I'm n t really in love with anybody," Sharlie wound up her train of thought, "and I do like Mr. Collins.

She pulled on her gloves, straightened her little hat and went out to meet him.

He was standing at the door, and outside under the porte cochere his car stood ready. To Sharlie it looked as s, lendid as the magic coach must have looked to Cinderella. Think of owning a car like that! Of driving down the street in it with Maude Hamber... peeking out from behind her curtains to see it, and with the Barnums all coming to their front windows to have a look, too!

As soon as they were in the car he found one of her hands with one of his. He held it tightly for a moment and then let go of it.

"Aren't you going to take off your glove, Sharlie? I want to hold your hand, not your glove."

Obediently Sharlie stripped off her glove and put her hand back into his.

"This is a lovely night, isn't it?" She leaned back in the seat and took great breaths of the cool misty air that was like soft-flowing water on her face as the car slid down the dark hill upon which the inn was perched like a feudal castle.

"I don't know, but this is a lovely girl," said Mr. Collins, pressing her fingers with his big ones. At the bottom of the hill where the shrubbery was thick and shadowy he put on the brakes and stopped his car.

CREOLE TRIPE WITH RICE

4 pints tripe
2 tbsps. butter
1 onion
½ green pepper
1 cup rice
2 cups boiling water
½ cup drained tomatoes
2 fresh mushrooms
Boiled rice
Parsley chopped
1 tsp. salt

Melt the butter in a saucepan and cook in it the onion, chopped fine. Then add the tripe, green pepper, finely chopped, the boiling water, the tomatoes, mushrooms, peeled and sliced and the salt. Boil five minutes. Cut the tripe in pieces 1½ inches square and roll them between folds of cheesecloth to remove all the moisture. Add the tripe to the contents of the saucepan and simmer ten minutes. Serve on a platter surrounded by a border of boiled rice. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley. This serves five persons.

MRS. E. COSTELLO
918 Hyde Park Ave., Hyde Park.

PEAR CONDE

1 cup rice
2 cups boiling water
1 tsp. salt
1 cup milk
6 pears
1 quart strawberries
½ cup sugar

Wash rice and cook it in the boiling water with salt until it is absorbed, then add milk and milk and continue cooking until it is dry. Turn out and press into a mold rounded by halves of pears. Fill the pear cavities with half the fresh strawberries, crushed and sweetened. Pour remainder of the crushed sweetened berries over the rice and pears. A spoonful of whipped cream with each serving is a great addition to this dish.

MRS. HARRY E. WHITTAKER

APPLE GINGER COBBLER

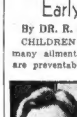
4 apples
¾ cup sugar
1 well beaten egg
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. ginger
¼ cup chopped raisins
1 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. lemon juice
½ cup sour cream
1 cup flour

Pare, apples and cut in thin slices. Combine apples, ¼ cup sugar, and the lemon juice. Place in buttered baking dish. Add 2 tbsps. butter. Place in slow oven (300 degrees F.). Bake 30 minutes. Sift flour, measure and sift with baking soda, baking powder, spices, and salt. Combine egg, ½ cup sugar, molasses, cream, and 1½ tbsps. butter. Add dry ingredients. Beat until smooth. Add fruit. Mix until blended. Pour over apples. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 40 minutes.

Lay Foundation of Good Health in Early Years

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

CHILDREN SUFFER from many ailments. Most of these are preventable.



Dr. Copeland

Merely to say this should put every parent on the alert to guard against unnecessary dangers.

The contagious diseases of childhood are readily transmitted from one child to another. Some of these can be avoided by proper care and in consequence much unnecessary suffering prevented.

Simple hygienic rules taught during childhood have much to do with the future health of the individual. It is believed by most students of the subject that the ideal place for such instruction is in the school.

I believe this an excellent plan, but certainly such teaching should not end there. It should be practiced, emphasized and repeated at home. Home teaching is sometimes more convincing than the instruction received at school. Unfortunately, many of us are careless about such matters. In any event, the instruction at school is vitally essential.

Children should be taught at an early age the use of the handkerchief. They should be instructed how to protect the nose and mouth when coughing or sneezing. They should be given the reasons why their not doing it may spread disease.

Every child should be warned against the common habit of placing the fingers and pencils in the mouth.

Every child should be carefully instructed in the necessity of washing the hands with soap and water. This habit should be acquired as soon as possible. Everybody, young and old, should remember the necessity of having clean hands before eating.

Brushing the teeth upon arising and retiring, should be made a part of the daily routine, of every child. This responsibility should begin at as early an age as possible.

To insure health among our young, it is advisable that they be examined periodically. Strict attention must be given to posture. Ear, eye, nose, throat, dental and other possible defects, should be discovered as soon as possible.

These are mere hints. But I do want you to know that the welfare of the child and the state of adult health are founded on the health practices of youth.

PATTERN 8588

Girl Loves Married Man Who Broke Her Heart

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl in my early years and work in a firm with several men. One of the men and I fell in love. He was married and quite a bit older than I. I am single. After a couple of years I grew to care more for him than anyone else in the world. Then he came and told me that we had to discontinue the affair. The breaking up meant nothing to him at all, but it left me broken-hearted. We both still work in the same firm, and it seems as if I can't stand it. I am losing my health through this strain. Advise me what to do as I have nobody, not even a family to whom to tell my feelings.

Why is it that married men act this way to single girls, when they know in the end they do not want them?

Broken-Hearted Girl.

Dear Peggy: I'm so sorry you have to face this ordeal under such trying circumstances as working in the same firm with a man who has treated you—and his wife—so badly. The best medicine in your case, and in the cases of other girls who have had similar experiences, is PRIDE. Take it on the chin, prove to this man that he isn't worth grieving over.

While considering Peggie's case, it's just as well for girls to consider that a married man, unfaithful to his wife, will make less bones about being unfaithful to his "sweetie". They're poor risks for honest-to-goodness affection.

Beautify Back for Evening Gowns

By HELEN FOLLETT

IN SHOPS where you buy beauty they're giving back treatments. Very necessary now when the heavenly evening robe reveals cuticle from shoulders to waistline. Action starts with a cleansing oil. Hot compresses follow, then the strong armed operator gets after any surplus fat that may be loitering round. While the backbone is not supposed to reveal itself, the perfect back has an inward slant along the line of the vertebrae. If persistent shadows left by last summer's sunburn hang on, bleaching creams are used instead of the usual massage emollient. Lastly come ice cold applications, drying, talcum sapping.

ARMS WHITENED—Rub a thick slice of a nice ripe tomato over arms three times a day and massage the juices into the skin with the palm of the hand. Let mixture dry on and after a short time wash off with cool water in which has been dissolved a bit of borax. Then apply your favorite cold cream.

More Tear Gas for Leather Strike Rowdies

GREATER BOSTON RIGHT NOW

Junior League Players Have Big Day

TEAR GAS FOR ROWDIES

Tear gas bombs went into action in no uncertain manner at Peabody yesterday afternoon, where riot caused injury to many leather mill strikers and bystanders. Here we see Chief of Police Edward F. Pierce of Peabody in his office, hours before the trouble, as he checked up on his tear gas bombs. They are tossed like the hand grenades of World War days. One bomb will rout hundreds from a room—all leave as they shed heavy tears. The strike has been in progress for nearly three weeks. ALL PHOTOS BY BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

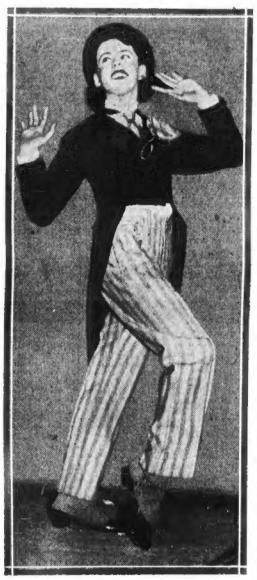
BIG SHOW DAY FOR JUNIOR LEAGUERS

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" is given twice today by Junior League Players. A packed theater saw the show at the Elizabeth Peabody Playhouse in Charles st. this morning. It is a "sell-out" for the afternoon presentation. Two of the star members of the society cast are here shown: Louise Reggio of Chestnut Hill as the "Maid" and Margaret "Peggy" Hinckley of Bay State rd. as "Dick." On Thursday and Friday these society girls entertained hundreds of children from Boston's settlement houses in free performances.

TO AID POOR

Specialty dance numbers were presented at the charity minstrel show in aid of the St. Cecilia's St. Vincent de Paul Society by Winifred Madden. Male impersonations were in order, for Winifred was in male attire, when the camera clicked. The Rev. Louis Cunney is spiritual director. Children of the parish made up the entire cast. Proceeds of the performance go to buy food and clothing for poor of St. Cecelia's parish. The St. Vincent de Paul Society looks after those in need. In some parishes more than 400 families are cared for.



EX-TEXAS FOLK DINE

These former Lone Star State folk, now residents of Greater Boston, Reynolds Ronci, Mrs. C. B. Taylor, Mrs. Samuel G. Baggett, president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and Samuel G. MUSEUM TEA-TIME

They poured tea and enjoyed it, too, at the Children's Museum, as new exhibition of arts and crafts of New England opened. Miss Margaret Slade (standing) and Miss Mary McSkimmon, Brookline, poured. The exhibition continues until May 15.

FIRE FIGHTERS

The Metropolitan Firemen's Post, American Legion, got right down to business at their dinner and smoke talk, at the Franklin School, in South End. Like old times, beer was served, and all made merry. Above you see a "couple of the boys" making merry with their steins. A special one-night license was issued for the sale of beer, the first permit of its kind to be issued.

A BIRD PAL

To children who study nature and visit the Children's Museum, Jamaica Pond, this bird "Jimmie" is an interesting pet. Minnie Ehnes is one of Jimmy's pals. He fell from tree three years ago. Nursed back to health at museum. Jimmy likes to play with rubber bands.

BOSTON'S OWN LITTLE LAMB

Did you know that right in the heart of the city of Boston there is a small herd of sheep? Well, it's true. Here's proof, photographed at the Boston City Hospital. And if that isn't a little lamb, we'll forget all about it. They use sheep and lambs for medical tests. John Fitzgerald is the shepherd.

SWAN BOATS OUT

The swan boats made their first 1933 trips on the pond in Public Garden, yesterday. What of it, you say. Well, Bostonians know that this means spring is here. The photographer caught a group of merry people.

Babe Ruth Home Runs They Are Different
Eyes of an Eagle
Fans Desire Winner
Sox Possess Fight
Indian Boxers Here

By JACK CONWAY

There is always something different about a Babe Ruth home run. When the great slugger got his circuit smash in the opening game against the Red Sox, he was batting against Weilman, a left-handed hurler. A left-handed hitter like Ruth is supposed not to be able to hit left-handed pitching as well as he does right-handed hurling.

Mr. Boston

The Ruth home run also soared over the left field fence. When left-handed clouters smash the little white agate out of the baseball orchard, they are in the habit of picking right field as their spot.

Ruth has been doing things differently from other ball players since he first broke into the major leagues with the Red Sox. I never found that he had any particular batting weakness.

Babe has the most remarkable eyesight of any man in baseball. When he starts his backward swing, he takes his eyes completely off the ball. He sights the ball after his huge body comes crashing forward. No other player takes his eyes off the ball for a second at any time.

I could sympathize with Johnny Watwood, Red Sox right-fielder, who misjudged two fly balls in a blinding sun. Harry Hooper, one of the greatest outfielders baseball has known, told me that right field at Fenway Park offers the toughest sun field in any big league park. Hooper was a brilliant fielder, but required all of his natural ability to overcome the effects of the sun.

Watwood will give a better account of himself after he has got accustomed to the tricky action of the sun as it blazes over the grandstand in the direction of right field.

Fighting Ball Club Always Forces the Breaks

You hear a great deal about this or that ball club getting the breaks. As a rule, it is the winning club that gets the breaks. This is not because it is lucky, but rather because it forces them. A team that keeps hustling at all times, no matter how many runs may have been scored by the opposition, is likely to force the breaks.

The new Red Sox impress me as that kind of a ball club. There is still a great deal of room for improvement in the Sox lineup. The club, however, will win a great many games this season on account of its splendid fighting spirit. It kept trying in the opening clash against the Yankees even when the score was 7 to 0 against it. The result was the Sox were only defeated by a count of 7 to 5. They were dangerous right up to the time the final out was made.

* * *

Boston Fans Are Hungry for a Winner

The 15,000 crowd at the opening game must have convinced Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins that Boston is hungry for a winning ball club. The fact the Sox had made a good showing on their road trip, and the additional appearance of Babe Ruth with the champion Yankees, caused great interest in the game.

Boston has supported weak second division clubs down through the years. If either Red Sox or Braves can produce a winning team, their owners will find the depression has ended as far as they are concerned.

Indian Boxers Will Prove Attraction in Title Tourney

The appearance of three Indian boxers in the national amateur boxing championships at the Arena on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week will lend color to the title battles. The Indians will compete as members of the Kansas City team.

Clay Turner and Tim Roebuck have been the outstanding Indians to make good in the ring. Roebuck later took up wrestling.

The Indians have done well in track and field athletics. Jim Thorpe, former Carlisle star, was an all-round champion as well as a great football player and a first-class ball player. Tom Longboat was one of the best of the Marathon runners.

The leading amateur boxers will compete in the nationals. Champions and near champions will let their fists fly.

Three nights of boxing should make the fans forget the recent lull in the game. A. A. U. authorities recognized the new economic situation when it decided to sell single tickets. In former years, it was necessary for a person to purchase a strip of tickets for the three nights of the show. Now one can pick his night.

Sox, Stagefright Beaten, Tackle Yankees Today

By JOE CASHMAN

The popular pilot led his club in hitting, master-minded brilliantly, wisely used every tool at his disposal and tongue-lashed his charges into making a close, thrilling fight of a game that saw the world's champions pound their way to a 7 to 0 lead in the first five innings.

Some 18,000 fans, Boston's largest opening day gathering in years, went away satisfied that the Sox have an able, fighting boss and convinced that the club will turn in its share of victories just as soon as a few of the hired hands start keeping pace with their leader.

And Martin Joseph promises that those who attend the second game of the series this p. m. will see not a few but all nine Fenwayites duplicate his fine work in the inaugural.

RECEPTION AFFECTED SOX

"The wonderful reception we received swept several of my boys completely off their feet in the opener" he explained today.

"I don't need to tell anybody who saw the game that the club was far below its road form. If we played half as well as we did in our poorest exhibition in either New York or Washington, we would have won.

"You'll see a different outfit today. The boys are all over their nervousness. They'll be natural, steady and in the running all the way this p. m."

ABLE PLAYERS NERVOUS

In the first two innings the Yanks scored three runs, without which they would have been beaten, 5 to 4, on outfield flies that a high school player could have caught but that were allowed to drop safely by Watwood and Johnson.

These two fly-chasers may not be the best in the business, but they're as good as the average and neither would be playing above a Class C circuit if he couldn't easily take care of 99 out of every 100 such drives as he missed yesterday.

Roy and Johnny were stage-struck. It was written all over them. So were most of their mates, both at field and at bat, for five innings. Then they all got their bearings, began to outplay the Yanks, scored five runs and had Charlie Ruffing on the verge of being derricked on more than one occasion.

If the Sox can play the same kind of ball for nine innings back of Gordon Rhodes today as they displayed in the closing chapters of the Friday battle they stand a fine chance of handing the first ticking of the season to the cheaty New Yorkers who'll try to get by with Don Brennan, Newark rookie.

Those Yanks, incidentally, look stronger than ever. Babe Ruth, who is now supposed to be a liability to the team except as a gate attraction, and is playing with a very sore throat, only batted a home run over the left field wall, hit a double, got two walks, scored two runs and drove in two more.

Earl Combs, another supposed has-been, belted out two doubles and a single. Every player in the lineup contributed at least one hit to the barrage of 18. The Yanks can be stopped but not often enough to prevent them winning the pennant just as early as they care to.

Bob Weiland, Johnny Welch and Justin McLaughlin were the victims of the Yankee attack. Or rather, Weiland and Welch were. McLaughlin, hurling the last two innings, gave four hits but didn't allow a run and the way he pitched himself out of two tough spots was one of the highlights of the afternoon.

He disposed of Ruth on an infielder grounder and didn't allow a run despite a double by Gehrig and a single by Lazzeri in the eighth. In the ninth, with runners on second and third and only one out, he forced Sewell to pop up, walked Ruth purposely and then got Gehrig on a soft grounder.

That performance sent the customers home with that sweet taste in their mouths that always brings them right back for more.

Oakley Tourney First on Local Golf Card

By BILL GRIMES

With the member and guest four-ball tournament at Oakley tomorrow as a starter, the golf season swings into action with the opening of the Greater Boston and Twilight four-ball league and a three-day open tournament at the Marlborough Country Club carded during the week.

In the first matches of the Greater Boston League, Brae Burn, defending champion, plays at home with Oakley. Pres. Leo Sagers' boys will present rather strong team, one capable of retaining its prestige in the face of the strength-ened Charles River and Woodland aggregations.

CHARLES RIVER STRONG

Through the acquisition of Elmer Ward, Joe Batchelder, Emory Stratton and Eddie Lowery, the Charles River Country Club will be a serious contender. Providing, of course, Ward and Batchelder can arrange to play. Ward, a former New England amateur champion, is only home for weekends, but if the going gets tough he may slip over from New York to lend assistance to his new club mates.

On Thursday the Twilight Four Ball League will start its spring division schedule.

Albemarle, perennial titleholder, will tackle Wellesley as a starter, Belmont Springs will battle Winchester on the latter's layout and Charles River will be at Brae Burn.

As has been customary for years, the Marlborough Country Club will stage the first M. G. A. tournament of the season, a three-day open, starting on Thursday and running through Saturday.

DAVIS CUP ACES ARE BEATEN

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 22 (AP)—The U. S. Davis Cup Team today had received an unexpected setback from boys left off the squad when Clifford Sutter, picked to play the singles against Mexico, and George Lott and John Van Ryn, the doubles combination, were eliminated in the semifinal round of the Mason and Dixon championship.

Sutter fell before Frank X. Shields, former member of the International team. Shields also figured in the downfall of Lott and Van Ryn, pairing with Lester Stoefen to defeat the veteran Davis cuppers.

Shields' victory carried him into the finals where he will meet Gregory Mangin.

Crimson Freshmen Visit Exeter Nine

Exeter, April 22—The Exeter nine will play host to the Harvard freshman this afternoon. The Harvard team which arrived this morning had Hovenanian, shortstop; Adsigian, catcher, Wood, center field; Gibbs, first base; Berry, left field; Baldwin, right field; Higgins; third base; Putnam, second base; Bramwell, pitcher.

15 Fleet Teams Start 6-Day Race at Garden

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Close to two hundred carpenters were busy today at the Boston Garden putting the big board saucer into place for the start of the Garden's first international six-day bicycle race which will roll off the mark exactly at 10 p. m. tomorrow night.

Garden doors will swing open at 7 p. m. At 8:30 p. m. a series of sprints will be started which will carry through until its time for the speed merchants to begin their 245 hours of dizzy whirling.

To pick any favorite from the group would be foolish for there are such riders as Norman Hill, Dave Lands, Bill Grimm, Franz Duelberg, Jimmy Walthour, Rene and Marcel Boogman, Cecil Walker, Fred Spencer, Harris Horder, John Bruskie, Reggie and Harold McNamara and Bobby Walthour, Jr., entered. Anything might happen in a six-day race from a wrecked bicycle to a fractured skull.

The Garden track, when completed some time tonight, will be little less than ideal with almost flat straightaways and corners banked to steep heights.

The Boston Emergency Relief Campaign will get the full proceeds from the opening night and the turnover is expected to swell the fund for interest in the six-day grind is great.

German Gives Up Polish Net Berth

Berlin, April 22 (AP)—Roman Najuch, German professional tennis star and a member of Bill Tilden's troupe, today advised the Polish lawn tennis association he would be unable to fulfil his contract to train Poland's Davis Cup team because of patriotic reasons.

Rosenbloom Meets Belanger on May 5

Jeffersonville, Ind., April 22 (AP)—Maxie Rosenbloom, of New York and Charley Belanger, of Canada, have been signed for a fight the night of May 5. They are light-heavyweights.

Boston University plays host to Colby at Nickerson Field this afternoon.

In a free hitting, loosely played game, the University of Vermont batted out a 12 to 7 victory over B. U. at Nickerson Field. The Catamounts were able to bunch their hits successfully, while the Terriers had a dozen men left on bases.

Browning Visits Wife in Hospital

Jim Browning, recognized as world's heavyweight wrestling champion in New York State, is here today. He arrived in Boston late yesterday afternoon, but did not go to the Boston Garden to see Jumping Joe Savoldi or Ed Don George in action. Instead he hurried to the Massachusetts General Hospital where Mrs. Browning is a patient. He remained at the hospital until late in the evening.

Mrs. Browning is recovering from the effects of a recent operation.

Jobless Problem To Grow Soon. Bill on Search For Perambulator.

—By BILL CORUM—

Baltimore, April 22 (US)—It has been a long time since you heard from our girl Mary, but I understand everything is all right and that it won't be long now until the unemployment problem will be complicated by one. With another mouth to feed it is high time we were up and doing, so we have come down here to Havre de Grace to look over some Kentucky Derby favorites.

A baker's half-dozen of them will be seen under colors here this afternoon, and in the list is the Sulzney stable's highly touted Repaid, now second choice to Ladysman in the futures.

This will be the Kal-Sang colt's first start as a three-year-old, but hoss who have watched him in training at the Aqueduct track on Long Island insist that if nothing happens to him between now and ten weeks from today, the Derby is as good as run and won.

Which would make it appear that we should look no farther for the spot in which to go after Mary's perambulator. But we have seen so many of these red-hot Derby tips go wrong, and in such an open race the price against Repaid seems too short to be intriguing.

HOPPING FOR BARGAIN

So I am still shopping around, looking for something at a fatter price than either of these favorites for our Mary, and I am just about to make Mr. Thomas Shaw, the commissioner, a sporting proposition.

If a filly called Swivel can beat Repaid down here this afternoon, she may then, Mr. Shaw has to for Mary and me, at his very cheapest, roundest price, that Swivel'll go on to win the Kentucky Derby.

If Swivel does not win this afternoon, no bet. Will Mr. Shaw's office be good enough to acknwledge in commission if Swivel wins, and will he please keep in mind that an extra point or two might make a great difference to Mary, since it might turn out to be twins? Who knows?

But why Swivel, I can hear you asking? Well, I'll tell you. My system of handicapping leans toward horses that work fast and win through the stretch, and this ready-going daughter of Swift Fire does both.

SWIVEL FAST FINISHER

She beat all the Eastern Derby candidates except Ladysman in the Jamaica Futurity last fall, and that futurity is the longest stake race for two-year-olds run—one mile and a sixteenth. In all her previous races, as a juvenile she was closing on horses in the run to the wire. In other words, if she won't come on, her past performances are most deceptive.

And Repaid, Ladysman, Head Play and some of those other colts may have grown into big, strapping three-year-olds, while Swivel remained comparatively small and dainty, as a lady should.

I don't know because I haven't had a chance to see her this spring. That's what I'm doing down here now. Just the same, Uncle Tom, the proposition goes as lies. If she wins today, watch out for Mary and me at the Downs six weeks hence. We may get it all.

KIRSCHMEYER BOWS TO DON IN MAT GO

By JACK CONWAY

Jumping Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame hero and conqueror of Jim Londos, jumped all over Count Zaryoff in their bout at the Paul Bowser show at the Boston Garden. In fact Jumping Joe jumped right on Zaryoff's chest to knock him out of the picture in 22m, 56s.

Referee Sam Smith and Whitey Kaufner held several conferences as to what they should call the fall.

"It looked like a Notre Dame drop kick," said Sam.

Whitey agreed with the referee's ruling.

The Count was on his feet and backing away when Savoldi pulled his surprise move. He moved forward suddenly, then shifted and like a bolt out of the blue leaped in the air. His feet bounced off Zaryoff's chest. The Count crashed to the mat and landed on his back. He was dazed by the shock of the blow, Savoldi immediately pinned his shoulders to the canvas.

SAVOLDI FAST

Savoldi impressed this writer as a remarkable physical specimen. He is six feet tall and weighs 210 pounds. He is well built, and is remarkably fast for a man of his size.

Ed Don George, world's heavyweight champion, watched Savoldi in action.

"Savoldi is a first class wrestler," said the champion after Jumping Joe scored his victory, "but I can defeat him. Savoldi still has a great deal to learn about the fundamentals of the wrestling game."

When wrestling was resumed the champion roughed Kirschmeyer up. He dropped Kirschmeyer with two smashing jackies. The Oklahoman then clamped on a flying leg scissors. Don held his feet, turned Kirschmeyer around, and crashed him to the canvas for a fall in 21m, 50s.

DON RETAINS TITLE

George set a fast pace when he returned to the mat, and won the second fall in 10m. 58s with an inside crotch hold and body slam.

The colorful Nick Lutze of California gave the crowd a thrill as he won from George Jenkins of New York in 11m with his famous double arm lock and reverse back fall.

Buck Weaver, University of Chicago, and Hank Barber of Dartmouth went 5m. to a draw.

Louis Loewe of France lost to Joe Monuet of Portugal in 30m. 58s. with a body lift and slam.

John Friberg of Sweden and Rudy Laditis of Portugal engaged in a 10m. draw.

The Blue Masked Marvel disposed of Leo Armino of Italy in 5m. 56s. with a top body scissors and wrist lock.

Pat McGill of Nebraska and Leo Numa of the University of Washington were on even terms at the end of 10m. of wrestling.

Mag Mountain Dean knocked off Joe Dominguez of Spain in 1m. 36s. with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

John Spellman of Brown and Charley Strack of Oklahoma went 10m. to a draw.

BRAVES IN ODD 4-HIT VICTORY

New York, April 22—A funny game, this baseball. No better proof could be offered than the first two games of the current series of the Boston Braves and New York Giants, which comes to a close here this p. m.

The Giants made eight hits and the Braves four in the first tilt and the natives won out, 1 to 0. In the second tilt, again the Terrymen made eight bingles and again the Warriors were held to four. Only this time the visitors won, 3 to 1, for their first victory of the season.

And what's even stranger, the pitcher who handed the New Yorkers their first setback was one Harry "Socks" Seibold, supposed to have been all through two years ago and expected to do only relief work, and very little of that, for the Braves this season.

HAINES SHIFTS TECH CREW FOR NAVY BATTLE

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP)—Coach Bill Haines announced shifting of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology crews on the eve of the races with Navy on the Severn today.

Haines said Whitmore, who has been in No. 4 seat on the junior varsity boat, would stroke the varsity eight in today's eight, and Cook, former stroke, goes back to the Jayvees. He added, however, Cook may be changed back to the varsity to replace Bixby.

Coach Walsh of the Navy said his varsity crew would be the same as met Princeton last week except Tom Baldwin, previously ineligible, would take the place of Smith.

Diamond Dust

—By JOE CASHMAN—

He's the same old Ruth. His legs are shaky, he's slowed down to a walk and he's playing with a sore throat that would confine most players to bed, yet he's still packing the parks and clicking home runs to satisfy his public. Some 15,000 attended the Sox opener to watch him and, in the fourth frame, he hoisted one of Johnny Welch's screw balls over the scoreboard atop the left-field cliff.

It wasn't the Bambino's longest drive at the Fens, but one of his most remarkable. There's not another left-handed hitter in the business that could drive a ball over that barrier so close to the foul line.

NATS IN SLUMP

The Senators haven't got over those two straight defeats by the Red Sox yet. They lost their fourth game in a row, yesterday, when Sugar Cain, Athletics' rookie, turned them back, 5 to 1. General Alvin Crowder, handed his first defeat in 17 starts by the McManusmen, was again the losing hurler.

Lynn's Bump Hadley halted the White Sox surge by holding them to two hits, while the Browns were hanging up a 4-to-0 victory.

And Wild Bill Hallahan gave St. Louis two shutout victories to celebrate by leading the Cardinals to a 4-to-0 triumph over the Cubs. The southpaw ace of the Streetmen gave only five hits while annexing his second victory in as many starts this season.

Another coat of whitewash was applied at Cleveland, the Indians blanking the Tigers, 5 to 0. Orsi Hildebrand held the Bengals to five safeties. Schoolboy Rowe, highly-touted Detroit rookie who won his first major league start last week, suffered his first defeat in this contest.

Sunny Jim Homers

A home run by Jim Bottomley was all that prevented Bill Swift of the Pirates from pitching a scoreless game. He gave only three hits as the Bucs were taking the Reds over the hurdles, 3 to 1. The victory put the Pirates back at the top of the National League standing.

Despite the announcement by the Red Sox management that yesterday wouldn't be observed as Ladies' Day at the Fens, hundreds of the fair sex went to the park under that impression. And they were admitted free, too, thanks to some Sox official whose kindness and intelligence is to be commended. From Friday hereafter will be Ladies' Day at the Fens.

He made three hits in four tries Friday while Al Simmons failed to connect. Johnny Vergez lost his place among the National League leaders. Pie Traynor, with two hits, taking second place and the idle Chick Fullis of the Phillies third.

'LEARN TO SWIM' PLAN TO BUILD CHAMPIONS

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

The city of Boston's Learn to Swim campaign, which starts in the two big municipal pools in Roxbury and Jamaica Plain, next Monday, not only will serve its chief purpose of cutting down fatalities from drowning and encouraging interest in swimming as a healthful sport, but undoubtedly will swell the list of champion swimmers developed in city pools.

Many of New England's champion amphibians, both men and women, learned to swim in either the Cabot Street or Curtis Hall baths. Other champions who had learned to swim elsewhere improved and developed under the expert tuteluge of the municipal instructors.

CHAMPS BOSTON PRODUCTS

Rose Pinof Weene, the noted professional, as famous in her generation as Gertrude Ederle, the conqueror of the English Channel, was in here, is a product of the Boston municipal pools. Mrs. Weene was the first swimmer, man or woman, to make the Boston Light swim. Her daughter, Eleanor, a regular attendant at the Cabot Street baths, is following in her mother's footsteps.

Out of the municipal pools came a whole flock of New England's leading mermaids. Among the champion women swimmers who were developed in the city pools are Katherine Mearis, Margaret and Katherine Lynch, Mary Sadowski, Geraldine Beinsenbek, Olive Holland, Barbara May, Mildred Toomey, Rena McDonald, Mildred Wiley, Phyliss Harris, Florence McDonald, Gussie Schnabel and Lillian Davis.

CAMPAIGN STARTS MONDAY

Park Commissioner Long and Superintendent of Baths James E. O'Reilly have everything in readiness for the start of the free instructions in the Cabot Street Baths, Roxbury, and the Crusit Hall Pool, Jamaica Plain, next Monday.

Head instructors Tim Cummings and Frank Rooney have rounded up a splendid corps of assistants and the more applicants the better. The instructions are absolutely free and are open to every man, woman and child in the city. The only charge that will be made is the nominal fee of 10 cents for towel, soap and suit.

Crimson, Tigers in Rugby Tilt

The Harvard varsity and junior varsity rugby teams will meet Princeton at Soldiers Field this afternoon. The junior varsity game will be at 1:30 p. m. and the varsity at 2:30 p. m.

The Princeton varsity team defeated the French Rugby Club, 9-8, but lost to the New York Rugby Club, 9-5.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Under no circumstances will players be allowed to participate in the qualifying rounds of the United States open championship, unless their entries are in the hands of the M. G. A on May 2, one week from next Tuesday.

Also, the participants must designate the district in which they wish to qualify. Henry Cuci is the only New Englander whose entry will be accepted without playing in the qualifications. Cuci finished within the first 20 a year ago and is therefore exempt from qualifying.

The New England sectional qualifying rounds will be played at the Woodland Golf Club on May 15. The amateur entry is restricted to three and under players. New England will probably be alloted six places, for which approximately 150 will battle.

South Shore Fete On

After scurrying around all week for suitable costumes, the members of the South Shore Country Club and their guests are all set for tonight's house warming, which officially opens the season for the Hingham club.

There is a little proselyting going on in the W. G. A. But, girls will be girls, so don't be too critical.

Bill Jordan, Belmont Spring C. C. who is president of the Twilight League, predicts a great season for his four ballers, whose season has been divided into two divisions, spring and summer. Johnny Bushell entertains the same opinion.

The Brae Burn Country Club is open today and the members are playing regular greens. During the recent wet spell, Brae Burn was closed, as was Winchester, whose members have not even been allowed to practice because of the soggy condition of the turf.

Understand that George Perry will attend the South Shore Country Clubhouse warming tonight disguised as one of the Singer midgets.

Gene, Jesse to Duel

Gene Sarazen, the U. S. and British open champion, and Jesse Guilford, former national, State amateur and State open title-holder, will play a 36-hole exhibition match at the Manchester, N. H., C. C., May 18-19.

Apparently the Montreal weather failed to make a hit with Art Ross for the Bruin manager is back in town. He played at Wollaston yesterday afternoon.

The Sandy-Burr Country Club is well on its way to a wonderful membership. The club house has been painted both inside and out, many of the old bond holders have renewed their membership and the club is beginning to take on the appearance of the old Sandy Burr, back in the days of Lake Tahoe.

Accompanying the M. G. A. schedule will be some worthwhile rules concerning the operation of open tournaments. In the past the M. G. A. suggested changes. Now they have made their recommendations mandatory.

Another Popeye Knockout in Next Saturday's Boston Evening American—Don't Fail to Get It!

RIVERSIDES FACE CLAN

The spring soccer season reaches its peak today and tomorrow with the national open cup final, amateur cup final and state semifinal contests down for decision.

The German-Americans of Philadelphia and the McKnight-Beveridge eleven of Pittsburgh face off at Philadelphia today in the national amateur cup final.

Tomorrow the feature contest will be played at New York where the Stix Baer eleven at St. Louis and the New York Americans clash in the second game of the series for the national cup. The Stix eleven won the first game.

Locally the big attraction tomorrow will be the semifinal in the state cup between the Clan McGregors of Quincy and the Lynn Riversides at Lincoln Park, South End.

A. U. title race. Her time was 2m. 35 2-5s.

Miss Kight also lowered the world's 200-yard mark in the same race as three judges clocked her at that distance in 2m. 20 5-10s., 1-10 of a second lower than the record set in 1930 by Helen Madison.

Miss Katherine Rawls of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., withdrew from the event in order to conserve her energy for the high board diving tonight. Miss Rawls has won the low board championship.

ISIDORO BOWS TO LOUGHRAN

Chicago April 22 (AP)—Professor Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, not quite so spry as he was, is still good enough to give some of the younger fighters fancy boxing lessons.

Hans Birkie, German heavyweight, knocked Otto Von Porat of Norway down in the first few seconds of the first round of their 10 round semifinal, but Otto rallied and fought his way to gain the decision.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Copyright, 1933, for the Boston Evening American.

"The W. C. T. U. will continue to point out that beer is an alcoholic liquor with all the consequences of an alcoholic drink," says an official statement.

It might be a good idea for the brewers to take over the W. C. T. U. and run it as a publicity bureau.

State of the Union
(Downey Gulch Gazette, Bisbee, Arizona) American

"Apparently nothing in motion picture trash can harm the younger generation of this day, as they seem to know more than their parents ever did or ever will know, but it is too bad that some sort of warning cannot be given the older people. Something such as 'No person over the age of 35 years admitted to this picture unless accompanied by high school student' should be printed in the ads of such pictures as 'So This Is Africa.'"
